TWO ARSON CHARGES FILED AS RESULT OF SALADA BEACH ARREST

Two charges of arson were filed this week against Robert Murphy, who is being held in Jail in connection with the incendiary burning of two houses at Point San Pedro in the northern part of the rounty last week. One of the houses is the porperty of Detertife George P. Wafer of San Francisco, one of the two detectifes responsible for the arrest of the three "terror bandits," and it is supposed that the burning of his house immediately following the arrest of Kelly, Weeks and Papadashes may be a retaliation measure by some more of the gang.

When the "terror bandits" were arrested it was found that their plans were laid in a bootleggery operated by the firm of Murphy and McCarthy, and this together with the fact that Wafer purchased the San Pedro place from Murphy's father, and that Murphy knew that it belonged to him, immediately cast suspicion on Murphy. He was accordingly arrested and held for investigation.

Sheriff McGovern together with detectives Wafer and Louis DeMati of San Francisco found that a car found wrecked on the road near San Pedro had come from the burned house, and that it had contained three persons of whom Murphy was one. This substantiated their belief. The other two persons were a barefooted woman and James Cochrane, a fireman of San Francisco. Cochrane was then arrested, but for a week the search was continued for the woman who was seen leaving the house barefooted.

The arrest Wednesday evening of Grace O'Brien at a house at Salada Beach has now completed the party and her story as told to Sheriff McGovern and District Attorney Swart has confirmed the case against Murphy.

The three went to the house, Miss O'Brien states, which Murphy claimed was his. Here all three drank heavily. After spending the evening at the place, Murphy set the house on fire and ran out of the door, leaving his two companions to escape as best they could. The woman ran out and later saw Cochrane.

Later they left the scene of the burning in the car, which belonged to Cochrane. Soon after leaving the burning building, Cochrane misjudged a sharp turn in the road and ran over the bank. The car turned over, wrecked. Here the woman states she was left by Murphy and Cochrane, who fled, and supposedly returned to San Francisco on foot. She took refuge in a house at Salada Beach, and had been in hiding during the search which has been in progress since that night.

Both Cochrane and the woman have been released on their own recognizance, and will be used as witnesses against Murphy when he comes to trial in the Superior court here.

Murphy is charged with second degree arson in a complaint filed by Detective Wafer. The second complaint charges him with first degree arson and was filed by District Attorney Swart for John Cavagnaro, owner of the house adjoining that of Wafter and which was also burned.

VICE-PRESIDENT U.C. SPEAKS ON AMENDMENT 10

Robert G. Sproul, vice-president of the University of California, was the speaker at the meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis club at the Fox Shoppe on Wednesday. Sproul spoke in favor of the passage of Proposition No. 10 on the ballot, which will make certain funds available for the improvement of the university.

"For the university and the state and in the interests of efficient and business-like administration," Sproul stated, "a long list of civic and other organizations in all sections, after careful investigation, have contributed, not only their endorsements but their active support of Proposition 10. These endoresments have been based up recognition of the needs of the University of California, which has on its campus at Berkeley more temporary and flimsy structures than on the combined campuses of any twelve leading universities in America and which, in Los Angeles, is attempting to accommodate six thousand students in a plant designed for less than half that number. The advocacy of Proposition 10 has been based, too, upon the fact that the money to be expended for the construction and completion of the state office buildings will be sufficient to pay twice over the principal and interest on that part of the issue, while at the same time eliminating waste and inconvenience.

"The amount provided for each of the projects covered by Proposition 10 is specified explicitly in the statute so that the voters may be sure that three million dollars wil be spent for State University buildings at Berkeley; three million dollars for the State University buildings on the splendid four hundred acre site at Westwood, donated to the State, free of all charges, by the people of southern California ;one and a quarter million dollars for the completion of the Capitol Extension buildings at Sacramento, and one and a quarter million dollars for a building to house the branches of State ofices now located in Los Angeles.

"Proposition 10 will reduce the expenditures of the state by approximately two hundred and fifty thousand dollars per year through savings in rent to be effected by the construction and completion of state office buildings included in the issue, and will, at the same time, add a relatively insignificant amount to the present bonded indebtedness of the State, since the issue constitutes but twelve-ten-thousandths of the State property valuation. In addition to these facts, Proposition 10 does not increase taxes but merely designates how a portion of the taxes now being raised shall be expended."

The chairman of Tuesday's meeting was Eastland Brittan, manager of the Bear Gulch Water Co. An unusually large attendance was present, and the meeting was a most interesting one.

VETERAN TREASURER ENDORSES MRS. COOPER

To the Voters of San Mateo County

When I decided to retire as treasurer of San Mateo county, I recommended my deputy, Grace Lawrence Cooper, for the position.

At the Primary election, Mrs. Cooper received the highest vote but not sufficient to elect her then, so it became necessary for her to again run for the office at the General election.

Knowing that Mrs. Cooper is fully competent to carry on the duties of the office in an efficient and able manner, I feel justified in again giving her my unqualified endorsement and strongly urge the voters of San Mateo county to lect her County Treasurer on November 2nd.

Again expressing my gratitude to the voters who have so loyally supported me during my incumbency in office for the past forty-four years, I am,

Very truly yours,
P. P. CHAMBERLAIN,
County Treasurer

CANDIDATE IN BELMONT VOTE FILES CONTEST

Contest of the election of trustees at the Belmont incorporation election on October 18 was filed Wednesday in the Superior court here by Thomas Pennington, one of the candidates.

Pennington tied with George Roussel for fifth trustee post. Both received 89 votes, according to the oficial canvass of the board of supervisors.

In the contest filed Wednesday, Pennington alleged that he received 95 votes in the election and asks for a recount. Sherman & Peters of San Francisco are his attorneys.

DIVORCE SUIT ON FILE MONDAY

Alleging his wife went out at nights with other men, John Nervi filed suit for divorce against Margaret Nervi Monday in the Superior court here. The couple were married February 11.

CITY BRIEFS

A. McSweeney, the popular tax collector, is abroad in the county collecting taxes from the property owners. He sends word that they are all paying cheerfully, finding no fault as to the rate and are pleased to be able to pay taxes in San Mateo county, the best section of the United States.

Eugene Cerqui, deputy in the office of the county clerk, has been kept busy this week receiving the congratulations of his many friends at his office upon the arrival of a baby born at the Community hospital on Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Cerqui make their home on the Woodside road.

After spending some months at the Mills Memorial hospital at San Mateo and undergoing a severe operation, John Ford, pioneer resident of this city, was able this week to return to his home on Winslow street. His recovery is a source of great relief among his many friends.

Miss Marion Corwin, who has been in Pennsylvania for several months visiting her sister, Mrs. Roy Holtz, has returned to her home in this city.

The members of the Christian Endeavor enjoyed a social at the Congregational church Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Hohberger assisted in making the evening enjoyable with many new games. Refreshments were served by Miss Mable Corwin and Miss Lillian Pipkin.

Henry Steinberger returned Monday from a trip to Los Angeles, where he went with his daughter, Mrs. John Cooke and little grand-daughter, Marion, who have been visiting here, and Mrs. Steinberger, who will spend a few weeks with her daughter in the southern city.

Frank Marcus, manager of the S. H. Frank Tanning Company, with his wife and mother, are enjoying a trip to New York. They will be away for about two months

Phil Robertson, a well-known young man of the city engineer's force, returned to Redwood City this week after a visit with his parents in Idaho.

The many friends of Mrs. Daniel R. Stafford will be pleased to learn that she is recovering rapidly from an operation which she underwent at the Mills Memorial hospital in San Mateo recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Walter have returned from a fortnight spent at Del Monte. While away Mr. Walter attended the 22nd annual convention of the California Real Estate Convention held at that place. He was elected a member of the board of directors of the association.

Joseph Iler, an old time resident of this city, was a visitor here this week renewing acquaintanceships of many years standing. Iler now lives in San Rafael.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hess Sr., who have been visiting in Europe for several months, principally in their old home in Switzerland, returned to Redwood City this week.

The Misses Claire and Madaline Shields, daughters of County Auditor and Mrs. Shields of this city, visited their parents here over the week end. The young ladies are now residing in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Kershaw of Reno, Nevada, are visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Branton on Roosevelt avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Kershaw are planning on making their home in Redwood City.

Rev. Ross Truman of Oakland will hold services in St. Peters Episcopal church tomorrow morning at 1 1o'clock. Rev Truman held services in the church during the past two Sundays. He is an eloquent divine.

The Druids Circle ..,100, will hold a card party in I. O. O. F. hall on next Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock. Good prizes will given the respective winners.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Myers, who have spent several months in a tour of the east, are expected home tomorrow.

Frank Penell, who passed away Wednesday at his home in Mountain View, is the father of David Pennel of this city. The funeral was held yesterday in Mountain View.

Louis Uhlenberg, who for the past several years has held a position with the Pratt-Low Preserving Company's office, has accepted a position with the P. G. & E. Co. in their local office. He with Mrs. Uhlenberg and their little daughter will make their home in Redwood City.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Carpenters' Union held a very successful card partf last Tuesday evening. Those with high scores were Mrs. Joe Pascoe, K. S. Murray, Mrs. Braichi, Mrs. C. WOODSIDE

Although it has had no call to fires since the rain of a month ago, the Woodside Fire Department is still functioning and the Bear Gulch Water Co. has been busily engaged during the last week in installing fire plugs along their pipe lines to make Woodside more secure from the fire hazard that has been so costly to this district in years past. Seven plugs are being installed at the present time distributed over the more thickly settled areas. These, together with our twelve hundred feet of hose, will insure protection to a very considerable portion of the residence district.

The Woodside Country Club is busily engaged in rocking the miles of road laid out this summer about its hillside property. These roads connect the homesites with the attractive clubhouse that was formerly the home of William Dimond. The Dimnods are in Europe, but on their return, they plan to build a summer home on property reserved by them over the crest of the hill, facing the La Honda canyon.

James V. Neuman negotiated the sale this week to Stuart Elliott of eight acres adjoining the Elliott place, bringing the Elliott property line out to the highway. This property contains some of the finest oak timber of the valley.

The christening of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dibble, Jr., was held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Church of Our Lady of the Wayside in Portola. Afterwards there was an informal tea at the Dibble home, "Enchanted Cottage," here in Woodside. The Rev. E. J. Cavanaugh, S. J., officiated at the ceremony and the baby was christened Oliver Dibble, 3r. Miss Florence Welch was the god-mother and Mrs. Dibble's brother, Mr. Hall Bishop, was the god-father.

The Woodside Parent-Teacher Association will stage its first community function on Saturday night when a Hallowe'en party will be given at the old school house, in the rear if the present school building. The arrangements for the party have been in the hands of Mrs. Tregenza, Mrs Givens, Mrs. Jarvis and Mrs. Neuman. The whole neighborhood has been invited.

A Hallowe'en dinner party was given on last Saturday night by Mrs. A. H. Audiffred to a group of her friends from San Francisco. There were thirteen guests at the table, the decorations were fitted to the occasion and the witching hour of midnight found the dinner in full swing.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling are exected to return from New York during the next two weeks. Although they will open a new hime in San Francisco, they will be residents here for a part of the winter.

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED AT FIREMEN'S DANCE

The annual dance of the Redwood City Fire Department will be held at the Foresters' hall this evening, and from all indications this event is scheduled to surpass any of the previous successful dances of the department. The annual dance of the fire department is always one of the outstanding events of the year among the enthusiasts of the waxed floor of this section, and can always be depended upon for an enjoyable time.

For tonight the department has been successful in securing Art Weidman's eight-piece orchestra of San Francisco. This is one of the best-known jazz producing octettes in the district and is expected to be a strong drawing card for this evening's entertainment.

The committee in charge of the sale of tickets for this event have been particularly successful this year and report that the people of the city have responded generously to their appeal for money. The annual dance is not only an important event among dance lovers, but is the only appeal made to the people by the department for funds with which to carry on their organization. The gratitude of the people for the splendid fire protection afforded by the volunteer department is always shown by the ample sale of tickets to the annual dance.

PIONEER RESIDENT DIES IN HOME AT PALO ALTO

Mrs. Annie Early, who passed away this week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Annie Loveland of Palo Alto, was a pioneer resident of this section. She was the wife of the late Peter Early, one of the earliest residents of Redwood City. The family later made its home in Woodside.

Early was a contracting farmer, and also had the distinction of driving the first water wagon in the county. This wagon was used to water Main and Bridge streets, the only streets in town which were watered at that time. Water for the wagon was pumped by Early from the creek by means of a hand pump which stood on the bridge at a point where the office of the Times-Gazette is now located.

Funeral services were held for Mrs. Early in Palo Alto this morning.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kneese returned yesterday from a trip around the country, delivering the ballots and other election supplies to the various boards. Everything is in readiness for Tuesday, when the voters of the county will register their choice for national, state and county officials.

Mrs. Kneese is painstaking, careful and efficient in this particular duty, as one mistake on her part, might invalidate the whole election. No fear of any errors when Mrs. Kneese is in chage of affairs.

RYAN'S DRUG STORE MOVES TO NEWL OCATION

On Monday Ryan's drug store will be open for business at its new location in the Sequoia hotel building. The drug store will occupy a section of the property until recently occupied by the Knox Dry Goods Company. The store has been completely remodeled and arranged in conformity to the latest usage for the modern drug business.

Ryan's Drug Store, of which P. A. Ryan is the proprietor, is one of the pioneer businesses of the city. For the last twenty years it has occupied the location in the Wahl building which it is now leaving. For ten years previous to that time Mr. Ryan conducted a drug business farther up Main street in a building where the Palace market now stands.

The proprietor is one of the progressive businessmen of the town and has by enlarging his business from time to time, constantly endeavored to keep breast of the needs of his community. It was in conformity to this desire that he recently opened a second store at 1130 Main street, to meet the needs of the southern end of Redwood City, a rapidly developing section.

Mr. Ryan will celebrate the opening of his new store by offering to his customers many unusual bargains at one of the well-known Rexall one-cent sales. This sale will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 4, 5, and 6. Announcement of a few of the bargains offered is contained elsewhere in this paper.

OLD TIMER REVISITS TOWN

Joseph C. Iler, who left here twenty-eight years ago, visited friends in Redwood City last Monday. He greeted P. P. Chamberlain, Dr. Ross, Ted Thompson and others whom he knew in those days of long ago. Many he was acquainted with in those days have long since passed on to the other side. Mr. Iler who has not been here for a long time, marvels at the growth and prosperity of Redwood City and predicts a wonderful future for the community.

Mr. Iler, as a young man, was a member of the famous quartette consisting of Joseph Iler, William McDonald, Williaim Wagner and Ted Thompson, well-known singers. McDonald afterwards won a national reputation as bass oand at one time was a member of the Robinhood Company. Iler was a sweet tenor singer, with a voice of wide range and sweetness.

While here on Monday he visited Stanford University, the base hospital and Dumbarton bridge. He was amazed at the wonderful activities in that section.

Mr. Iler is well remembered by all old timers who were glad to greet him and talk over pleasant affairs of the past. Mr. Iler is a resident of San Rafael.

NEW BRIDGE MAY BE OPEN FOR BIG GAME ON NOV. 20

The board of directors of the Dumbarton bridge has decided to open the new bridge on Saturday, November 20 and Sunday, November 21, in order to accommodate traffic for the Stanford-California football game. The construction will not be entirely completed at that time, so that the bridge may be closed to the public the following Sunday night and not formally opened for some two weeks later. The birdge company officials estimate that at permanent established rates the company should make in the neighborhood of $10,0000 in these two days.

The Complete Circuit Diagram for the "A," "B," "C" Line Supply Device Described Herewith.

The biggest difficulty to be overcome in obtaining "A" current from the house a. c. lighting supply is in finding a rectifier that will pass sufficient current for the filaments and yet make battery elimination an economical proposition. In the course of a description of an efficient "A," "B," "C" line supply device in the Radio Broadcast Magazine, B. F. Roland writes as follows: "A logical solution to the difficulties of "A" power filtering is to connect the filaments of the radio tubes in series, thus reducing the overall current consumption.

"The accompanying diagram shows a unit which has been found entirely satisfactory for use in conjunction with a receiver employing 199 type tubes in series. Due to the fact that the current consumed is small, the filter choke coils are of reasonable proportions. This device will supply voltages and currents as follows:

"'A' battery—60 milliamperes, 6 to 30 volts.

"'B' battery—Up to 25 milliamperes, at 200 volts, 90 (variable) volts, 45 (variable) volts.

"'C' battery—From 0 to 50 volts.

"The use of the device is, of course, restricted to radio receivers employing tubes similar in characteristics to the UX-199 or DV-3 tubes with filaments wired in series, and under these conditions its performance as a universal power is ideal. The device illustrated is adaptable to any type of radio circuit and has been used with success on a three-circuit regenerative set, the Browning Drake, and tuned radio-frequency receivers, with variations of each type. Transformer-resistance or impedance-coupled amplifiers have been employed indiscriminately with equally good results.

The Power Transformer

"In the diagram, T_1 is a General radio power transformer designed for 50 watts, 110 volts, at full load. The high voltage secondary provides 350 volts each side of the tap at the center at no load. The third winding, T_2, provides 5 volts at 5 amperes for the 'raw' a. c. filament supply of an UX-112 or UX-171 power-amplifier tube. This may be supplied by a separate filament lighting transformer. In this construction, a Brach unit serves the purpose nicely. Across each half of the secondary, T_1 is connected a 0.1-microfarad buffer condenser, c_1 and c_2, of 1,000-volt flash test type. The outer ends of this winding are connected to the filament terminals of a standard UX type socket, into which is plugged the new type BH Raytheon rectifier, Ra, which is capable of passing 85 milliamps. The plate terminal of the socket, corresponding to the cathode of the Raytheon tube, is connected to the plus side of the filter circuit. The filter circuit of this power unit includes choke coils, L, capable of passing 85 milliamperes direct current without heating, and having a residual inductance of at least 25 henries per choke at this value of direct current. The General Radio type 366 standard "B"-substitute choke is admirably suited for this service. Others which fulfill the above requirements will probably be equally as satisfactory.

"The voltage-control unit shown at the right-hand end of the diagram has been tried under all conditions, and has given good service. There was some difficulty in obtaining proper values and current-carrying capacities of the various resistors and, after considerable testing, the units specified were adopted. All of the parts in the control unit may be obtained from regular stock of the various manufacturers or their dealers. For the plate voltage of the power-amplifier tube, the maximum 'B' plus is taken directly from the terminals of the filter circuit. This terminal provides approximately 200 volts at full load. A clarostat, R_4, is used to control the voltage output of the next lower tap ('B' plus Int.) and will give from 90 to 135 volts approximately on the usual plate-current drain at this voltage. The 'B'-plus detector tap is obtained through the use of another clarostat or a Bradleyohm No. 10, R. One-mi-crofarad condensers are connected in both of these cases from the 'B' plus variable to 'B' minus to bypass rheostat noises; and to prevent undesirable coupling between the various amplifier stages.

"C" Battery Voltage.

"The 'C' battery voltage is obtained from a wire-wound variable resistance of the proper value. As this resistance carries the full-load current of the device, it must be designed to carry 70 to 85 milliamperes without change of resistance, and without excessive heating. If high 'C' voltages are desired, say up to 60 volts, the Federal No. 25 potentiometer is a good resistance to use here. It has a maximum resistance of 1,850 ohms, and will carry the full-load current fairly satisfactorily. A General Radio No. 214 potentiometer may be used in this position to supply 'C' voltage up to 34 volts, and does so with much less heating. An 11mfd. condenser is connected from 'C' plus to 'C' minus to prevent undesirable coupling effects and distribution. If 60 volts 'C' bias are required and 85 milliamperes pass through the resistance supplying it, the power that must be taken care of is 5.1 watts.

"The a. c. filament winding, T_2, may not be available to the average constructor who may, however, have access to a 50-watt transformer having other satisfactory windings. In this case a Thordarson doorbell ringing transformer may be used to light the filament of the power amplifier tube. This transformer will be found to give the proper voltage without a filament rheostat for the UX-171 and UX-112 tubes, using the winding marked '6 volts.' A 400-ohm potentiometer, R 8, is connected across the 5-volt a. c. supply and the center tap is returned to the 'B' minus terminal of the supply unit. The adjustment of this potentiometer is very critical in order to eliminate all a. c. hum from this source. The 'A' plus terminal of the power supply is obtained by dropping the 'B' plus max. through a suitable rheostat to the required 'A'-battery voltage. The resistance used in this position should have a range of from 3,000 to 5,000 ohms, and a current-carrying capacity of 60 milliamperes. As there was no rheostat of these requirements available, the writer used a combination of fixed and variable resistances to achieve the degree of control required. A fixed Ward Leonard 3,000-ohm unit was placed in series with a Ward-Leonard 5,000-ohm fixed resistor, around which was shunted a Federal No. 25 potentiometer."

Limited Wave Range Handicap

Many American radio sets offered for sale in Euprope are not capable of receiving wave lengths above 600 meters, according to a consular report to the Department of Commerce. As many of the largest and most popular stations in Europe broadcast on a longer wave length, this is asserted to be a handicap to American manufacturers.

Careful With Tubes

When you place the tubes in the sockets be careful how you handle them. Many tubes have been injured by rough usage. The tips are sometimes broken and thus make poor contacts. Do not take the tubes out of the sockets any oftener than is necessary.

Soldering

Wiring connections in a radio receiver should be soldered to insure a perfect electrical joint. This is particularly true in circuits carrying radio frequency currents. Soldering also serves as a means of making a permanent connection and preventing loose joints which cause noises and loss of signals.

R. F. Amplifiers Not Cause of Distortion

The receiving circuit proper—that is, the r. f. system, including detector—has little to do with the quality a receiver is capable of outputting. Inventors and manufacturers often claim improved quality for their radio-frequency and detecting systems, which claim, like many you will run across in radio, is meaningless. Quality does not enter into direct consideration until the audio amplifier is reached. No r. f. system should distort. However, many can be made to distort if one tries hard enough. On the other hand, any accidental distortion in an r. f. system is easily eliminated without heroics.

Distortion in the r. f. system occurs in comparatively few cases, and it is always due to the cutting off of the side bands. This phenomenon, in practical reception, is met with only through excessive regeneration. Regeneration makes a circuit tune sharply. But an efficient receiver must tune with enough broadness to cover frequencies 5,000 cycles on each side of the frequency-carrier wave—which frequencies (side bands) represent the higher notes. Therefore if regeneration is carried to an excess the higher frequencies—the high notes—will be lost and quality impaired. The output of a receiver cutting off the high notes will be drummy—as if the announcer were talking into a barrel.

Distortion of this type is easily remedied by cutting down on the regeneration control—if there is one—and by lowering the r. f. and detector filaments.

For Tight Terminals

When placing a wire terminal under a terminal nut, the wire should be twisted the way the nut turns. Otherwise the tightening of the nut will loosen the wire from the terminal rather than hold it tight.

To Simplify Assembly

Before removing wires to make repairs, mark both sides with a number. This will avoid the possibility of a mistake and make assembly easier.

Good Printing
THE kind of printing that pays dividends is the kind you should have. Pale, muddy, poorly printed matter is worse than none. The quality of your business is often judged by the quality of your stationery—inferior printing gives an impression of cheapness that is hard to overcome, while good printing carries with it desirable suggestions of quality.
We produce only Quality Printing. Whether you want an inexpensive handbill or letterhead in colors, if you order it from us you will be sure of getting good work. We have the equipment and the "know how" that enables us to get out really good printing—printing that will interest people with the goods which its users. That is the kind of printing that FIRMING the action taken at Omaha convention last year, erican Legion voted over- gly to hold the 1927 conven- tion in Paris from September 19 to September 23, inclusive, and to reconvene in New York on October 18 for a business session. The pilgrimage to France will be known as the "Second A. E. F.," and it is estimated that 28 ships will be needed. The Leviathan will be the flagship and the Legionnaires will sail from Montreal, Boston, New York, Hampton Roads, Charleston, Jacksonville and Galveston or Houston.

Paris correspondents assert that high officials of the Legion have authorized the formation of a "moral secret service" within the ranks of the delegates who are expected to go to France, the purpose being to control the behavior of the boys, prevent regrettable incidents and arrange trips and entertainments in which the cabarets and too lively cafes will not be included. The co-operation of the Paris police has been obtained. Propaganda is being started to impress upon the delegates the necessity of good behavior to foster cordiality and friendship with the French people.

ORGANIZED labor of America, as represented by the American Federation of Labor, is equally opposed to Italy's Fascist form of government, which it declares is autocratic, and to Russia's Soviet form of government, which it denounces as the most unscrupulous, anti-social and menacing institution in the world today. By its declaration on Russia the convention in Detroit really put a ban on participation by members of the federation in a proposed mission for the investigation of the economic conditions of Europe, including Russia. This mission is to be under the direction of L. E. Shepherd, head of the Order of Railway Conductors.

President Green and John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers, vigorously denounced the subversive campaign of Russian sympathizers within the ranks of organized labor in America.

The federation indorsed citizens' military training camps and labor's entry into the banking and insurance fields; condemned injunctions as applied to industrial disputes, and shop representation plans, otherwise known as company unions, and reiterated its advocacy of the direct primary law. A New York delegate introduced a resolution for the indorsement of Gov. Al Smith for President of the United States, but the resolution committee dodged this by reporting that Smith is a candidate not for the Presidency but for re-election as governor and as such "has the support of the New York Federation of Labor and of an overwhelming number of unorganized wage earners and citizens."

REPRESENTATIVE EDWARD W. POU (Dem.) of Smithfield, N. C., has written to President Coolidge urging that he call a special session of congress to meet the situation in the South caused by the large cotton crop and the drop in prices of that staple. It was stated at the White House that the letter had been received, and that the President had replied to it pointing out the measures which already had been taken and expressing the hope that these would prove effective.

THE Department of Agriculture has made public the crop reporting board's crop summary for the United States as of October 1. It indicated preliminary production of all wheat at 839,818,000 bushels, or a yield per acre of 14.6 bushels, including 213,336,000 bushels of spring wheat, averaging 10.2 bushels yield per acre. It also indicated, for corn, a condition of 72.4 per cent of normal, with 2,679,988,000 bushels of production, yielding 26.5 bushels per acre. For oats, the preliminary indicated production is 1,282,414,000 bushels, a 27.9 bushels yield per acre.

JOHN H. WALSH, one of the three Democratic members of the United States shipping board, has sent his resignation to President Coolidge. His successor has not yet been named, but under the provisions of the merchant marine act he will be a Democrat and representative of the Gulf states.

LAWRENCE DENNIS, American charge d'affaires at Managua, was busy last week arranging for the peace conference between the Liberal and Conservative forces in Nicaragua which it was hoped would end the civil strife in that republic. American naval forces already had landed at Corinto and were preserving the peace. The leaders of the Liberals intimated they would continue, with Mexican help, their fight against Chamarro's de facto government unless the peace conference should offer them considerable concessions. They want the former vice president impeached and deported and Senor Sacasa made president. Mr. Dennis insists that all factions must agree to a free and impartial election.

TWO representatives of the Polish government arrived in Washington and presented to President Coolidge 100 volumes containing the signatures of 5,000,000 Poles expressing their gratitude to the United States for its post-war help. One million of the names are those of school children and the remainder are those of persons in all walks of life. The President also was presented with a commemorative gold medal and silver medals from the same dies were given to Secretary of Commerce Hoover and the United States Military academy.

TWO notable men met death by accident last week. H. H. Topakayan, wealthy importer and for years Persian consul general in New York, was killed by a fall from the seventeenth story of the Yale club in that city. D. P. Davis, one of the best known of Florida's real estate men and the builder of Davis islands at Tampa, fell overboard from the liner Majestic while en route to Europe and was drowned.

AFTER a 40-day siege, the city of Wuchang, China, was stormed and captured by the Cantonese troops. The commander of the garrison was caught and promptly executed, but it was presumed his forces would be incorporated in the Canton army. The besiegers gained their first entry into the city through treachery of some of the defenders, and the ensuing battle was fierce and bloody. The civilians who remained passive were not molested.

A cablegram from Peking says three American missionaries who were captured by bandits in western Hunan province have been released without payment of ransom after being held 18 days. They are Miss Minerva Well and Karl H. Beck of the Reformed mission and Miss Lydia Koebbe of the Evangelical mission.

BOTH France and Poland have perfectly balanced budgets for 1927, according to official announcements. The French budget provides for the collection of approximately $1,237,951,000 in direct and indirect taxes. It makes no provision for exterior political debts, but does contain credits which cover payments for A. E. F. war stocks and take care of the Morgan loan. Almost one-third of Poland's income for next year will be spent on the army, and the next greatest amount will be set aside for the ministry of education.

Finance Minister Volpi of Italy says his government is determined to stabilize the native currency and wipe out speculation. The program is to stabilize the lira at 120 to the English pound, a figure which will enable industry to import raw materials at reasonable prices and dispose of its products at a fair profit.

STALIN and his colleagues in the Soviet government of Russia have lost patience with Trotzky, Zinoviev and Pyatakotiv, who have been carrying on a campaign against them throughout the country, and have ordered them placed on trial before the central control committee of the Communist party.

DELIBERATION for nearly sixty-six hours failed to bring agreement in the jury that heard the conspiracy case against Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, and T. W. Miller, former alien property custodian, so the jurors were dismissed. Their final vote was 7 to 5 for conviction of Daugherty and 10 to 2 for conviction of Miller. The indictment still stands, but the government's attorneys would not say whether or not there would be a new trial.

NEW COATS FEATURE CUFFS; COLORFUL CREPE FROCKS

TO THINK that cuffs, mere cuffs, could be so interesting! But they are. The newer-designed coats are proving it too. Surely nothing could be more attractive in the way of an ultra-smart coat than the one in this picture and the picturesque pirate cuffs which it boasts have much to do with the dash and go of its style. We are to have more and more of the pirate and the cavalier cuff, so fashion tells us.

Aside from the cuffs, which give this coat so much chic, there are other details which tell the world the dernier cri from Paris. There is, for instance, the handsome velvet applique arranged in strappings of military precision and as to the color of this coat, here, indeed, is the very latest described, for blonde and beige shades are the talk throughout all fashionland. The fact that the hand-appliqued velvet and the kasha cloth from which this coat is made, are perfectly matched light beige, stamps this model with authoritative style. Furthermore, the dainty shoes worn with this adorable coat carry out the same beige or blonde color scheme. It has come to be most important that one's shoes match or at least harmonize with the costume. To this end stylists are featuring navy kidskin shoes with suits and street frocks of that same shade while brown footwear in all its variable. Velvet pockets used in conjunction with other velvet details denote this season's mode. The new cavalier flaring cuffs cut of velvet, also velvet cape collars, adorn many a silken frock.

Interesting Cuff Treatment.

Two distinct trends are evidenced in the latest velvet-trimmed frocks. One is for the colorful frock, preferably one of the new wine shades or perhaps jungle green or likely a rust tone; or some desirable shade of blue, or if one aspires to the extreme of the mode a biscuit-colored crepe embellished with matched velvet. The other call of fashion is for the black crepe or dull satin frock trimmed in black velvet.

Most unique is the crepe frock trimmed in bands of velvet ribbon, so arranged as to present an ombre effect. That is, the velvet is of deepest color, grading each row a tone lighter.

Borderings of velvet which extend at each side of the front opening, from neck to hemline and then around the bottom of the dress are fashionable. Velvet pockets used in conjunction with other velvet details denote this season's mode. The new cavalier flaring cuffs cut of velvet, also velvet cape collars, adorn many a silken frock.

Bloomers and Knickers in Winsome New Shades

Bloomers and knickers are engaging in style and color with many new shades. These form the answer to underdressing with the autumn ensembles, suits and frocks, and the lady with the long purse may indulge her fancy for color in many new garments. They are to be had in pansy, pervanche, navy, geranium, fawn, rosewood, plum, rush, French nude and the staple colors. Now that dyes are more trustworthy, black is being worn a great deal in these bloomers—all of glove silk or rayon. All of the crepes are being used for lingerie of all descriptions and some who have become accustomed to the very sheer stuffs cling to them for chemises, stepins and nightgowns. Garments of this type are shown in delicate shades of yellow, pink, green, orchid and blue, with some stunning combinations of black and white. Models in these last are trimmed in chantilly, in black and white, in striking contrast.

OLD-FASHIONED DISHES

Corn is so well liked as a vegetable, in soup, scalloped, and here it is in

Corn Muffins. — Beat two eggs, add a tablespoonful of melted lard, a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and two cupfuls of corn meal. Add enough milk to make a thin batter. Grease muffin pans and pour in batter. Bake one-half hour.

Fresh Corn Soup.—Grate the corn from four or more ears, the amount depending upon the size of the family to serve. One-half cupful of grated corn will serve two. Cover the cobs with cold water and boil them for 20 minutes, drain the water and add to the grated corn with milk and seasonings. Cook for a few minutes until the corn is well cooked, adding butter and flour, a teaspoonful of each for a pint of soup. Serve hot, unstrained.

Fresh Corn Gems.—Two cupfuls of fresh-cooked corn put through the meat chopper or cut fine, one-half cupful of milk, two eggs, two cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a tablespoonful of melted shortening. Bake 25 minutes in gem pans. Canned corn may be used with more milk for moisture.

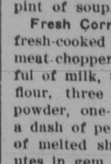
Flummery.—Make a rich custard, using six eggs, one quart of milk, and sugar to taste. Scald one and one-half cupfuls of milk, add two ounces of gelatin which has been softened in a little cold milk. Whip one quart of cream, add one cupful of sugar, add the gelatin to the custard and when well mixed and cool, the whipped cream. Pour into molds and cover with crushed macaroons. Flavor with vanilla.

The old-fashioned gingerbread is always a delightful dessert served hot with a marshmallow sauce.

Ginger Bread.—Take one cupful of molasses, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of melted shortening, a half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of ginger, one egg, three cupfuls of flour, and lastly a cupful of boiling water in which a teaspoonful of soda is dissolved. Mix well and pour into a large shallow pan. Bake 40 minutes.

Everyday Dishes.

A tasty luncheon dish which may be prepared in a short time is:



Chicken Chop Suey.—Take two cupfuls of minced cooked chicken, a cupful or two of celery (more is good if necessary to piece out the dish), one small minced green pepper and a cupful of rice. Cook the rice and use as a border for the platter. Into a frying pan put a tablespoonful or two of corn oil, or any good vegetable oil; when hot add the celery and pepper and stir until softened, then add the chicken with a cupful of chicken stock, if at hand, or any gravy leftover. Cover and simmer, adding seasoning to taste, then just before serving add two tablespoonfuls of soy sauce and pour another tablespoonful over the rice. Serve hot. Steak is good served this way, or a combination of pork and beef.

Chicken With Asparagus.—Cut a young chicken into six or eight parts, season well and brown in two tablespoonfuls of butter, then add a cupful of stock and a bunch or can of asparagus. Cook for two hours at the simmering point.

Surprise Biscuit.—Make a soft biscuit dough, roll out and cut into biscuits; spread with minced cooked beef well seasoned. Lay on another biscuit and bake. Pour over a rich brown gravy and serve piping hot. This makes a good luncheon dish.

Snow Balls.—Make a plain cake flavored with orange and bake in iron Brownie pans, filling them one-third full. Remove when baked and spread the flat side with orange marmalade, putting two together in pairs, making a ball. Now cover with boiled frosting and roll in coconut.

Lobster Salad.—Take two cupfuls of flaked lobster, one cupful of diced celery, four tablespoonfuls of capers, one-fourth cupful of mayonnaise and one head of lettuce. Mix the ingredients lightly and serve on lettuce with a cupful of mayonnaise to which one cupful of finely minced cucumber has been added. Sprinkle with paprika and finely minced parsley.

Yankee Plum Pudding.—Take one cupful of finely chopped suet, add one cupful of New Orleans molasses, sift three cupfuls of flour with one-half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of cloves, nutmeg and salt; add alternately with one cupful of sweet milk, reserving some of the flour to dredge one cupful of raisins and one cupful of walnut meats broken into bits; mix well and turn into a buttered mold and steam three hours. Serve with an egg sauce. Beat two eggs, add one-half cupful of sugar and when dissolved add one-half cupful of hot milk and a teaspoonful of grated lemon rind.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

To Support Shortridge

SAMUEL M. SHORTRIDGE

There is scarcely any doubt but that San Mateo county will be the banner county of the state in its vote for Senator Samuel M. Shortridge at the general election next Tuesday. Mr. Shortridge's home county is prepared to give him a rousing vote. The people know his worth, know what he has done for the state and they are going to show their appreciation by giving him the largest plurality ever accorded a candidate for that office in the State of California. The senator's friends believe his majority over his opponent will be nothing short of a half million votes. We predict this majority for him. The voters of the state demonstrated their confidence in Mr. Shortridge by the big vote given him at the primary election last August. His vote next Tuesday in his home county will be enormous.

Let Your Choice Be Free

Congressman Arthur M. Free has faithfully and conscientuously represented this district at Washington. He has done a great deal for his constituents, carried out their wishes and should be returned with a big vote at the election to be held next Tuesday. Mr. Free is a man of unquestioned ability, his long experience at the capitol, his close touch with the president and his wide acqueintance with public men of Washington make him a valuable representative. The Eighth district is fortunate in having Mr. Free at the helm to work for the interests of his district. Vote for Mr. Free next Tuesday and give him an overwhelming majority. The district needs him.

In Samuel Shortridge, California is well represented in its national policies, where the tariff issues which concern the agricultural districts in general and the Republican party individually, being capably administered and promoted by him.

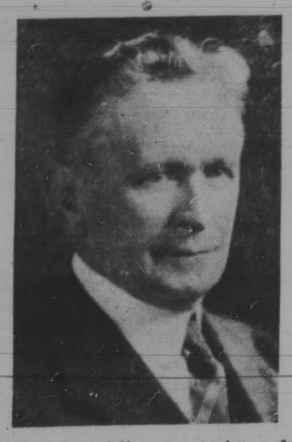
Don't be deceived by the misleading title of No. 8—"State Highways." It should have been designated "Sectional Highways."

To vote good roads November 2nd, remember to mark your ballot in two places—YES on No. 4, NO on No. 8.

May the Governor Be Young



C. C. Young, republican nominee for governor, is entitled to the support of every loyal republican regardless of who might have been their first choice when the party was engaged in selecting its nominees. There is no valid reason why Mr. Young should not receive the solid backing of the party which gave him the nomination over the others. We believe that in the most part Mr. Young will receive this support. That he will be elected there is no doubt. The great Republican party is composed of widely divergent elements and there is often difference of opinion, but right and fairness demand that those beaten in a fair primary contest should support the victor.

We believe that Republicans will vote for C. C. Young for governor. Those who opposed him in the primary election never disputed his abiilty, they admitted his integrity, and they believed in his sincerity. They favored another man whom they thought was entitled to another term. Since the majority of republican voters did not think so, they are now qualified to support in a bold and manly way the man who defeated their candidate. This paper proposes to do that very thing. We will vote for C. C. Young, the next governor of California.

Seeks Seat In Court

Joseph McInerney, the candidate favored generally for election to the unexpired term of the late Supreme Court Justice Thomas J. Lennon, was the intimate friend and volunteer campaign manager of that beloved jurist. The Lennon family prevailed upon McInerney to run and has been publicly urging his election as the logical successor to Justice Lennon.

Through many years of close personal association with Justice Lennon and his work, McInerney is steeped in the ideals and principles that marked the judicial career of his departed friend.

By every measure, including his own reputation and success as a lawyer, McInerney is eminently qualified to succeed Justice Lennon. There is every assurance that McInerney would emulate Justice Lennon in his work on the Supreme Court bench.

McInerney is in the prime of maturity. He would bring vigor and personality to the state's highest tribunal. He has ample experience, keen intelligence, capacity and probity. He sprang from the common people, who are proud of his climb in the legal profession. His viewpoint squares with that of plain, honest people, and he would be a bulwark against the cliques that seek to control our courts.

McInerney's past proves that he is ameniable to no influence interested in other than a square deal for all of the people of California. Vote for him November 2.

Runs On His Record

Any man can be elected to office once. It takes a man of proven ability and integrity to so retain the confidence of the people that they will repeatedly vote to retain him in public office.

Jesse R. Curtis, Associate Justice, Supreme Court of California, and candidate to succeed himself, has steadily grown in the confidence of the people of the State through the fine sense of fairness and justice, ability and experience, which have characterized his legal and judicial work.

From a successful legal practice where he earned the confidence of his own community, he was elected District Attorney. Later he was elected and re-elected Superior Judge. Promoted to the higher court to fill a vacant brief term between elections, he was at the next election elected Justice of the Second District Court of Appeal, and was later elevated to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

With his long experience gained in private and public life, he is unusually well qualified to deal with the questions which come before the highest court of our State. Vote for Judge Curtis, and retain the experienced services of a proven official upon the Supreme Bench.

FUNDS FOR STATE HIGHWA

California voters must choose carefully between the two propositions on the November 2nd election ballot dealing with highway financing.

If California is to continue as a good roads state, maintaining a reputation for leadership in this respect throughout the nation; if the prosperity and development of the state is to continue unthrottled by lack of highway transportation facilities; if our highway system is to be completed on a state-wide basis fair to all sections, then Proposition No. 4 must be carried and Proposition No. 8 must be defeated.

No. 4 is the one-cent gasoline tax plan providing an equitable "pay-as-you-go" method of financing that insures completion of the highway system within a reasonable time.

No. 8 is an inadequate, sectional scheme linking a legislative appropriation with an arbitrary division of the state into two highways and voting districts, and allocating an unfairly large proportion of all highway funds to one section of the state.

Funds of the state for construction of new highways planned in our system are exhausted. The state's share of the present two-cent gasoline tax is entirely needed for maintenance and reconstruction, the purpose to which it is alloted by the law.

With our present investment in good roads already more than $100,000,000, the system stands less than half completed with many communities hampered by lack of proper arteries.

No. 4 fulfills every demand of the emergency situation and builds for the investment in good roads from which ist reaps dividends in reduced car operense. The gasoline tax plan, proven fair and just to highway users and paying ment, in this instance would provide of more than $10,000,000 annually for sufficient to finish the job of highway bu equalling the sum set by most competeities as needed for this work.

JOSEPH M'INERNEY CAUTIONS HIS SUPPORTERS

Joseph McInerney, candidate for election next Tuesday as Associate Justice of the State Supreme Court to fill the unexpired term of the late Justice Thomas J. Lennon, in a final pre-election statement here yesterday, cautioned his supporters against over-confidence and urged that they work towards getting out the fullest possible vote. His statement, in part, follows:

"I believe that the wide-spread stories about the certainty of my election are being circulated by persons hoping that over-confidence will decrease my vote at the polls. I want my friends to know that I have a positive and definite fight on my hands and that the only way we may make certain of success election day is by getting out the biggest possible vote. If this is done I am confident that I shall be elected by a substantial plurality.

"I want all persons aiding my campaign to know that I very deeply appreciate their efforts and that I shall make every endeavor to reciprocate by an unswerving devotion to my official duties in the event I am elected. I shall strive to the utmost of my ability, if elected, to emulate the late Justice Lennon in the administration of justice. From a long and intimate association with that beloved jurist I have absorbed his ideals and principles. He stood for even-handed justice to the rich and poor, the powerful and the weak. If elected, I will follow in the footsteps of Justice Lennon to the best of my ability."

ICE IMPORTANT FACTOR IN PREVENTING SICKNESS

Somebody is always knocking the stuffing out of our cherished beliefs. Here, for ever so many years, we have believed that in China a doctor gets paid for keeping his patients well, and loses his pay when a patient becomes ill. Now comes the statement of an authority on Oriental life that this is a rank fallacy. The Chinese physician earns his fee in the same way as does his brother medico of the western world.

But fallacy or not, the idea that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure is a good one. And more and more, medical science is bending its energies to the prevention of illness.

It was not so long ago that every mother dreaded the approach of the hot season. Sickness among young children during the summer and warm autumn months was almost an invariable rule. Infant mortality took a decided increase. Now, however, all this has been changed. Hot weather has no terror for the mother of growing children; for with one simple device, science has been abe to prevent a great percentage of summer illness among children. That device is a well-iced refrigerator.

Contaminated food, espesfcally contaminated milk, is one of the chief causes of such illness. It is caused by bacterial growth in the food, and often the contamination exists when it is not apparent to the taste nor smell. But the bacteria cannot thrive in a temperature below 45 degrees. Hence the mother who sees to it that the refrigerator is well-iced is practicing one of the surest means of preventing illness.

Against No. 11

Number 11 on the November ballot is a proposed constitutional amendment to exempt from taxation, certain private schools Since no argument against this proposal appears in the pamphlet issued by the Secretary of State, we set forth certain reasons why voters should vote no on this proposition.

First. Tax exemption is wrong in principle, because it means that one group of citizens or class of property benefits at the expense of all the others.

Second. Exemption of private schools is wrong in principle, because it is in opposition to the great American idea, that free education should be provided for all. To exempt private schools from taxation, is to cut off public revenue from that source. To the extent that that is done, the general public are forced to contribute to private education, and at the same time to maintain facilities for free education.

Third. Nearly all private schools are based upon sectarian education in religious matters. The constitution of our government is opposed to the use of public funds for sectarian purposes When a private sectarian institution is exempted from taxation, the public is really contributing to sectarian education to the extent of making a gift in the amount of the taxes which would otherwise be paid.

Fourth. The real beneficiaries of this amendment will be schools maintained by religious denominations.

We respectfully urge every voter to vote "no" on proposition Number 11.

$500 LIQUOR FINE IMPOSED

Dave Hilton of Redwood City was fined $500 by Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin Tuesday. He was charged with violating the Wright act.

Telephone Line Will Extend the Bay Area Soon

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. is engaged in completing an extensive long distance cable installation between the San Francisco Bay area and Sacramento, which will be the largest project of ths kind west of Chicago and will represent the latest developments in the telephone art. The service demands between the San Francisco bay area, Sacramento and tributary points have shown a steady increase during the past few years. Telephone experts have made every endeavor in their analyses of future conditions to provide instrumentalities to adequately meet the growth in this territory and this project, which had its initial inception with the company early in 1926, has been under active construction for the past twelve months, and will be placed in service in time to meet the holiday business of this year.

The long distance cable is ninety miles in length and is routed by way of Oakland, Crockett and Carquinez Straits to Sacramento. It is equipped to initially care for two hundred and seveny-five talking lines between the bay area and Crockett and one hundred and thirty-five lines through to Sacramento. By placing additional equipment, this number of lines can and will be materially increased as occasion may require and will eventually be the means of caring for all service to Sacramento and points north and east as far as Portland, Seattle, Chicago and New York.

The cable comprises approximately forty thousand miles of wire weighing in the neighborhood of two thousand tons and suspended aerially upon 2,000 poles. Its cost will be nearly two and one-half million dollars, including a specially designed and constructed building at Crockett which will be used as a repeater or booster station and will house approximately one hundred repeaters. These repeaters or boosters, as they are more commonly called, are of the most improved type and are designed to boost the conversations over the wires so as to make the audibility comparable with local calls over shorter distances.

Involved in the construction is the installation of four separate submarine sections of cable; two in San Francisco Bay, one across Carquinez Straits and one across the Sacramento river at Sacramento. These submarine cables are of special design and were manufactured for the particular use to which they have been put, namely to meet the situation in spanning San Francisco Bay and other points mentioned, where submarine cable is necessary. They are about four inches in diameter, weigh sixteen pounds per foot and are known as "loose core design" containing sixteen and nineteen gauge wires, each covered with a double wrapping of heavy paper ribbon, with the entire set of wires again encased in a lead sheathing wrapped with a jute covering and protected by heavy steel wires which constitute armor covering for the cable.

This whole project is but another example of the efforts of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company to meet the ever increasing demands for telephone service on the Pacific Coast and is the forerunner of other extensive projects of similar character.

YOST ACQUIRES A NEW CROP OF "PIGSKINNERS"

Richard Dix

Of the thousands of college students in the past twenty-six years who have undergone rigorous training with Football Coach "Hurry Up" Yost at the University of Michigan, Leland Stanford, Nebraska and Minnesota,—not one has slipped his memory.

It is Yost's boast, and one which he has frequently substantiated, that he can remember the name of every man who ever played under his guidance. And what is more, "Hurry Up" can tell without a moment's hesitation, what work an ex-student is engaged in and where he can be found.

Among Yost's "boys' are men who have since become captains of industry, and workers in the arts, sciences and professions. Many of them have kept up a regular correspondence with their foowball mentor over a period of more than a quarter of a century.

To this list Mr. Yost is now adding the names of Richard Dix and more than a score of ex-collegiate football players whom he put through the paces while filming gridiron sequences in Richard Dix's latest Paramount starring picture, "The Quarterback," which arrives at the Sequoia Theatre Nov. 3 and 4. Some of the celebrities appearing with Dix are now divided in interest between professional football and screen acting. Needless to say, if the latter calling proves their forte, Yost will have no difficulty in keeping up with the careers of these pigskins artists.

For No. 11

By Zacheus J. Maher, S. J.

No human document and no legislative act of man is so complete in its extent as not to merit revision after a lapse of time, when new conditions have given rise to new relations. For this reason it is not to be wondered at if at times amendments to the State Constitution be submitted to the people for ratification or rejection.

In keeping with this thought there is submitted to the people of California at the coming election amendment No. 11 which should be voted yes without question or hestitancy.

No 11 is designed to exempt from taxation non-profit high schools accredited to the University of California. This amendment should be passed.

It is well known that private non-profit universities and colleges such as Stanford, the University of Southern California, Mills College, College of the Pacific, Santa Clara, Pomona, Whittier, Occidental and others are exempted from taxes provided they in turn do not conduct grammar schools on their premises. Since the cases are parallel, the reasons that prompted voters to grant the former exemption should induce us to grant exemption No. 11.

One of our dailies recently voiced the fear that this amendment might lead to an indefinite extension of exemptions. There need be no fear on this point. The very conditions laid down in the amendement removed this possibility.

The thoughtful voter will naturally wish to know how many schools would be entitled to tax exemption were No. 11 to pass; how much taxes they pay, and finally by how much his own taxes would be increased if this amendment were passed.

The questions shall be answered in order:

Twelve schools are involved.

The total tax paid was $35,000 in 1925.

The $35,000 lost by the amendment will be distributed over municipal and county taxes throughout the State of California and being partitioned among so many will be felt by none. The situation is quite similar to that which would be obtained were one hundred men to carry a stick of timber; should one man fall out, the ninety-nine would not notice it for the reason that he carried so small a fraction of the load. And $35,000 is as nothing compared with the millions of dollars paid in. The beam would be a tooth pick and the carriers would be legion.

CARRINGTON CANTATA HEARD OVER RADIO

Those who were listening in to Station KPO Tuesday evening were pleased to hear the cantata, "The Swallow", sung by the glee club of the San Francisco State Teachers' College. "The Swallow" was written by Otis M. Carrington, musical instructor of the Sequoia Union High School, and was sung for the first time publicly at the graduation ceremonies of the class of 1917 from that institution. At that time the solo parts were sung by Camilla Stafford and Margarete Muller and the duet parts by Ruby George and Marie Uhlenberg. The choruses were sung by the other members of the class.

"The Swallow" is one of the best-known of Professor Carrington's cantatas, but he is not dependent for his fame upon this class of music, being better known as the producer of a large number of popular school operettas which are now pubished by the firm of Meyers & Carrington and are used throughout the United States, as well as in a number of foreign countries.

JOHN STELLING, RACE TRACK MAN, NAMED IN SUIT

Bringing suit for divorce for the second time in five months, Mrs. Amelia Stelling asked marital freedom from John D. Stelling, manager of the Tanforan race track, in San Francisco Wednesday.

Mrs. Stelling charges her husband with cruelty, alleging that he has often remained away from home until late at night and frequently failed to appear for meals she had prepared. Demand is made for $125 a month alimony. Stelling has been ordered to appear in court next Friday.

Last June Mrs. Stelling sued for divorce on the same grounds and then dismissed her suit eight days later.

The Girl in the Mirror

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

(© by The Century Company.) WNU Service

STORY FROM THE START

Laurie Devon, a gay young chap somewhat inclined to wildness, has recently succeeded as a playwright. His wealthy sister Barbara, who has helped him to succeed, has just been married and is going to Japan, leaving Laurie on his own. Epstein and Bangs, his theatrical partners, have promised Barbara to keep an eye on Laurie. They scold him for his laziness of late, and he retorts that he seeks adventure. From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite. From the elevator boy in the girl's house Laurie learns the girl's name is Mayo. Again in the mirror's reflection he sees her with a revolver and fears she means to commit suicide. He rushes into her apartment, and, winning her confidence, induces her to lunch with him, though she warns him of danger. At lunch she admits there is a mystery in her life.

"That won't do!" he declared. "The lid is off. You've just admitted it. You feel better for having it off. So do I. As your big brother, and self-appointed counselor, I choose this opportunity to tell you what you're going to do."

She pursed her lips at him. It was the gesture of a rebellious child. Her entire manner had changed so suddenly that Laurie felt a bewilderment almost equal to his satisfaction in it. For the first time throughout the interview he experienced the thrill she had given him in the mirror.

"Yes?" she prompted.

"In the first place—" He hesitated. The ground that stretched between them now was firmer, but still uncertain. One false step might lose him much of what he had gained. "There's the question of your future," he went on, in a brisk, matter-of-fact tone. "I spent two months last year looking for a job in New York. I was about down to my last cent before I found it. It occurred to me that, perhaps, you—" He was beginning to flounder.

"That I am out of work?" she finished, calmly. "You are right."

Laurie beamed at her. Surely his way was clear now!

"I had a streak of luck last year," he resumed. "I collaborated on a play that people were foolish enough to like. Ever since that, money has poured in on me in the most vulgar way. I clink when I walk. Dollars ooze from my pockets when I make a gesture. Last week, at the bank, the cashier begged me to take some of my money away and do something with it. He said it was burdening the institution. So, as your adopted brother, I'm going to start a bank account for you," he ended, simply.

"Indeed you are not!"

"Indeed I am!"

"I agreed to live. I did not agree to—what is it you Americans say?—to sponge!"

He ignored all but the phrase of the reply.

"What do you mean by that?" he demanded with quickened interest. "Aren't you an American?"

She bit her lip.

"N-o—not wholly."

"What, then?"

She hesitated.

"I can't tell you that just yet," she said at last.

"Oh-h!" Laurie pursed his lips in a noiseless whistle. The girl's voice was musically English, and though her accent was that of London, up till now she had spoken as colloquially as any American. Indeed, her speech was much like his sister's. He was puzzled.

"Why didn't you tell me this before?"

"That I am not wholly American?" She was smiling at him ironically, but he remained serious.

"Yes. And—oh, a lot of things! Of course you know I am all at sea about you."

The familiar shadow fell over her face.

"When one is within an hour or two of the next world," she asked indifferently, "why should one tell anybody anything?"

"How long have you been in America?"

"All my life, off and on."

This at least was reassuring. He imagined he saw a gleam of light. The girl had declared that she was not a spy, nor involved in war propaganda; but it was quite possible, he reasoned, that she was enmeshed in some little web of politics, of vast importance to her and her group, of very little importance to any one else.

"I suppose," he suggested cheerfully, "that net you've said so much about is a political net?"

They had been speaking throughout in low tones, inaudible at any other table. Their nearest fellow diners were two middle-aged women at least thirty feet away. But she started violently under his words. She made a quick gesture of caution, and, turning half-around, swept the room with a frightened glance. Laurie, his cigarette forgotten in his fingers, watched her curiously, taking in her evident tension, her slowly returning poise, and at last the little breath of relief with which she turned back to him.

"I wish I could tell you all you want to know," she said, "but—I can't. That's all there is to it. So please let us change the subject."

His assurance returned.

"You're not a crown head or an escaped princess or anything of that kind, are you?" he asked politely.

This time she really laughed, a soft, low gurgle of laughter, joyous and contagious.

"No."

"Then let's get back to our bank account. We have plenty of time to run over to the Fifth avenue branch of the Corn Exchange bank before the closing hour. What color of check book do you prefer?"

"I told you," she declared with sudden seriousness, "that my bargain did not include sponging."

For the first time in the somewhat taxing interview her companion's good humor deserted him.

"My dear girl," he said, almost impatiently, "don't beat the devil around the bush! You've got to live till we can find the right work for you, and that may take some time. You have intelligence enough to see that I'm neither a gay Lothario nor a Don Juan. In your present state of mind you're not fit to decide anything. Make up your mind, once for all, that I'm going to decide for you. It will save us both some trouble."

He stopped. He had discovered that she was not listening to him. She was sitting absolutely still, her head a little turned. Her lips were slightly parted, and her eyes, wide and staring, were fixed on some one across the room.

Laurie's eyes followed hers. They focused on a man sitting alone at a little table. It was clear that he had just entered, for a waiter stood by his side, and the newcomer was giving judicious attention to the bill of fare.

He was a harmless-looking person, of medium height and rather more than medium stoutness, carelessly dressed in a blue-serge suit. His indifference to dress was further betrayed by the fact that his ready-made four-in-hand tie had slipped the mooring of a white-bone stud, leaving that useful adjunct of the toilet open to the eyes of the world. His face was round, smooth-shaven, and rather pale. He had dark, slightly veiled gray eyes, which blinked near-sightedly at the menu. Altogether he was a seemingly worthy person, to whom the casual observer would hardly have given a second glance.

While the two pairs of eyes across the room stared at him, he confided his order to the waiter. It seemed a brief order, for the brow of the latter clouded as he wrote it down and de-

"I Came Over Here," He Said Casually, "to Mention to You That You Are Annoying the Lady I Am With."

tachedly strolled off. The newcomer leaned back in his chair, and, as he did, so glanced around the room. His projecting eyes, moving indifferently from table to table, suddenly rested, fixed, on the girl. They showed interest but no surprise. He bowed with a half-smile—an odd smile, bland, tolerant, and understanding. Then, disregarding her lack of response, he fixed his eyes on the wall facing him and waited patiently for his luncheon to be served.

Laurie's attention returned to the girl. She was facing him again, but her eyes looked past him as if he were not there.

"He has found me, even here," she muttered. "Of course he would. He always does."

Laurie looked at her.

"Do you mean," he asked crisply, "that that chap across the room is following you around?"

She looked at him, as if abruptly recalled to the fact of his presence. Her eyes dropped.

"Yes," she muttered, dully. "I may escape him for a time, but he always learns where I am. He will catch me when he chooses, and roll me about under his paws for a while, and then—perhaps—let me go again."

"That sounds like a certain phase of domestic life," commented Laurie. "Is he by any chance your husband?"

Her eyes held a rising anger.

"He is not," she said. "I am not married."

Laurie dropped his dead cigarette into the ash tray, and rose with a sigh.

"It's all very confusing," he admitted, "and a digression from the main issue. But I'm afraid I shall have to go to the exertion of reasoning with him."

She started up, but before she could protest or restrain him, he had left her and crossed the room to the stranger's table.

CHAPTER V

Mr. Herbert Ransome Shaw

The man in the shabby blue-serge suit detached his absent gaze from the opposite wall, and looked up quickly when Laurie stopped at his side. He was clearly surprised, but courteous. He half rose from his chair, but the newcomer waved him back and dropped easily into the vacant seat opposite him. He was smiling. The man in blue serge was not. He looked puzzled, though vaguely responsive. A third person, watching the two, might almost have thought the episode the casual reunion of men who frequently lunched together.

Laurie leaned forward in his chair, rested one elbow on the table, and, opening his cigarette case, extended it to the stranger. The latter rejected it with a slight bow.

"Thank you, but not before lunch," he said, quietly. His voice and manner were those of an educated man. The quality of his tone was slightly harsh.

Laurie lit a cigarette, blew out the match and looked straight into the stranger's projecting gray eyes. He had acted impulsively. Now that he was here, he was anxious to put the job over concisely, firmly, but, above all, neatly. There must be nothing done that would attract the attention of the few persons in the big room.

"I came over here," he said casually, "to mention to you that you are annoying the lady I am with. I want to mention also that the annoyance must stop."

The glance of the stranger held. Laurie observed with interest that the veiled look of the projecting eyes had changed a little. The change did not add to the stranger's charm.

"Before I answer you, tell me one thing," he said, formally. "By what right do you act as the lady's protector?"

Laurie hesitated an instant. The question was embarrassing.

"Has she authorized you to act?"

"In a way, but—"

"How long have you known her? How well do you know her?"

Command of the interview was slipping from the younger man. He resolutely resumed it.

"Look here," he said, firmly, "I came to this table to tell you something, but I will decide what that is to be. I am not here to answer questions. It is enough for you to know that circumstances have given me the right to protect the lady from annoyance. I want to make it clear to you that I shall exercise that right. Hereafter you are to let her alone. Do you understand? Absolutely alone. You are not to follow her, not to enter places where she can see you," he recklessly ended.

The stranger looked at him through the light veil which seemed again to have fallen over the projecting eyes.

"I should really like to know," he said, "when and where you met her. I saw you starting off together in the taxicab, but I am not quite sure whether your first encounter occurred this morning."

"And you won't be." Laurie stood up. "I've warned you," he said curtly. "I don't know how well you understand our laws in this country, but I fancy you know enough of them to realize that you cannot shadow a lady without getting into trouble."

"She admitted that?" The stranger appeared to experience a tepid glow of emotion. "She must know you better than I thought," he added reflectively. "Doris is not the type to pour her confidence into every new ear," he mused, seeming to forget the other's presence in his interest in this revelation.

"Have I made myself quite clear?"

Laurie was staring at him with a mingling of resentment and interest. The other nodded.

"You have, my young friend," he said, with sudden seriousness, "and now I, too, will be clear. In return for one warning, I will give you another. Keep out of matters that do not concern you."

Laurie grinned at him.

"You forget that I have made this matter my concern," he said, lightly. "Try to remember that."

The other man rose. His manner had changed to a sort of impatient weariness.

"Get her out of here," he said abruptly. "You are beginning to irritate me, you two. Take her home, and then keep away from her, unless you are looking for trouble."

He delivered the last words so clearly and menacingly that the waiter who had appeared with his luncheon heard them and fell back a step. Looking into the veiled eyes, Laurie also felt a sense of recoil. The fellow was positively venomous. There was something serpentlike in the dull but fixed look of those goggling eyes, in the forward thrust of the smooth brown head.

"I've said my say," he retorted. "If I ever catch you around that studio, or in any way annoying the lady, I'll thrash you within an inch of your life; and then I'll turn what's left of you over to the authorities. Understand?"

He nodded and strolled back to Miss Mayo's table. For an instant the other man stood looking after him, as if tempted to follow. Then, with a shrug, he dropped into his chair and began the luncheon the waiter had placed before him.

Laurie found the girl standing by the table, ready for the street, her coat fastened, her gloves buttoned.

"Oh, how could you!" she gasped. "What did he say?"

Laurie summoned the waiter with a gesture and asked for his account.

"Sit down a minute," he suggested, "and tell me who he is."

"Not here," she urged. "I couldn't breathe here. Hurry, please. Let us get away!"

She was so obviously in earnest that he yielded. He paid the bill, which the waiter had ready, accepted that appreciative servitor's help with his overcoat, and escorted his guest from the room.

"But, for heaven's sake, don't run!" he laughed. "Do you want the creature to think we're flying before him?"

She flushed and moderated her pace. Side by side, and quite deliberately, they left the restaurant, while the stranger watched them with his dull, fixed gaze. He seemed to have recovered his temper, but it was also plain that the little encounter had given him something to think about. When he resumed his luncheon he ate slowly and with an air of deep abstraction, as if working out some grave problem.

"What's his name?" asked Laurie, as he helped Miss Mayo into a waiting taxicab.

She looked startled. Indeed, his most casual questions seemed to startle her and put her, in a way, on her guard.

Who is this hard-boiled stranger? Is Laurie letting himself in for a peck of trouble?

Friedman Unsurpassed as Leader

Benny Friedman, all-American quarterback in 1925 and captain of this year's Michigan team, is unsurpassed as a leader on the gridiron. The photograph shows Friedman kicking. Coach Yost is praying that some day he will get another star like him. Last year the Wolverines had a wonderful success on the gridiron and the fact that Benny is back augurs well for success again this year.

A brief account of the first half-minute of the Michigan-Wisconsin game at Madison last October will give you an idea of Friedman's capabilities. Royle Harmon kicked off for the Badgers and it was Michigan's ball on its own 40-yard line. Wisconsin naturally expected a running play, but they didn't know the Wolverine quarterback. Benny took the ball from center in a short punt formation and shot a 30-yard pass to Gregory, who ran the remaining 30 yards to a touchdown. Friedman then kicked the goal for the extra point, and Doyle Harmon kicked off again—this time right into the hands of Bennie Friedman. All Benny did was to run 80 yards through the whole Badger team for a touchdown and then kick the goal! And just 37 seconds of play had elapsed! Wisconsin was getting acquainted with Benny now.

That's the way it went all year, with Friedman probably having a hand in more touchdowns than any other player in the country. Only in the Northwestern game, which was played under most adverse weather conditions, did he fail to play bang-up football.

Sternaman in Shape

Joe Sternaman, captain of the Chicago Bulls in the National Pro Football league, has rounded into great shape for the 1926 season, and great things are expected of him.

New Golf Champion Won Utah State Title at 15

George von Elm learned how to play golf in his own back yard. The new twenty-five-year old champion, who took the American amateur title by beating Bobby Jones, began driving and putting when he was eight years old.

As a schoolboy he laid out a miniature golf course in his back yard and spent many hours there when free from his studies. He imitated noted golfers about whom he read or had seen play. Von Elm's home was in Salt Lake City, Utah, then.

At nine he started as a caddie at the Salt Lake City Country club. In 1916, when he was fifteen, he entered the Utah state championship tournament and upset all precedents by handily winning the title. Since then he has captured the Utah golf laurels four times.

Horseshoe Title Is Won by Young Girl

Youngsters have been cutting a big figure in sports recently. One of the latest of these young phenoms is a ten-year-old girl, who was crowned women's state amateur horseshoe champion of Minnesota. No, she was not one of Sweden's fair daughters. Her name is Prene Pagliarini. In her conquest the girl assumed the air of the most seasoned pitcher, and annexed the state title by winning 18 straight matches, triumphing over some of the veteran players of the state.

Cornell Star Will Seek Olympic Honors in 1928

Henry A. Russell, former Cornell university sprinter, recently returned from Europe where he has been on tour since last July. Russell, who is a member of the New York Athletic club, intends to remain in the running game until after the Olympic games of 1928 and possibly longer.

The lanky Cornellan was the sensation of the college sprint world last spring and early summer. His meteoric rise began on the evening of March 6. Unheralded, Russell was entered in the 70-yard dash in the fifth annual indoor championship meeting of the I. C. A. A. A. A. Nobody, aside from the undergraduates and Coach Jack Moakley of Cornell, figured him as a championship possibility. Alfred "Truck" Miller of Harvard and Frank Hussey of Boston college were the favorites.

Russell captured the event after a close race. Then came the outdoor intercollegiates. Again Russell won, this time the 100 and 220-yard events. Russell was a member of the Cornell-Princeton track and field team that crossed the seas for a meet with the combined Oxford-Cambridge teams last July.

Ruth's Full Cut

Babe Ruth, the Yankees' great home run star, is a picture in action at the plate. Ruth, when about to take a cut at the flying sphere, brings his right leg back across his left, in a movement somewhat similar to shot putters when about to throw the iron ball. As Ruth swings he pulls his body away from the plate, getting every ounce of drive into the swing of the bat. He has no favorite bat, and makes his hits to all parts of the field.

Waner Sets Record

One of the brightest young stars to come into the National league in some time is Paul Waner, sensational outfielder of the Pirates. Waner has been playing bang-up ball all year and stepped right into balldom's hall of renown by smashing out six hits in as many trips, two being doubles and one a triple. The Pirates obtained Waner from the Pacific Coast league where he enjoyed a reputation of being a hard hitter.

Star English Rider Wins Half of Card

It was a Fred Rees day at the opening of the Lingfield steeplechase meeting in England recently, the star English jockey accounting for half the card. He started off by riding to victory Mask Man in the Cowden selling steeplechase.

Rees' second success was gained in the Southern handicap steeplechase, in which he rode Major G. Larnach Nevill's Ibstock to victory over Mrs. S. Prince's Mullaghmast by eight lengths. The third of Rees' winners was Greenhorn, which did not have much trouble in justifying his favoritism in the Cobham, a hurdle race for three-year-olds.

Tyrus Cobb Blames His Pitchers for Poor Show

It takes pitchers as well as batters to win pennants, and pitchers are something the Tigers "ain't got," Ty Cobb said as he packed away his baseball clothes for the year. Cobb had just completed his sixth year as manager of the Detroit Tigers, winding up in sixth place.

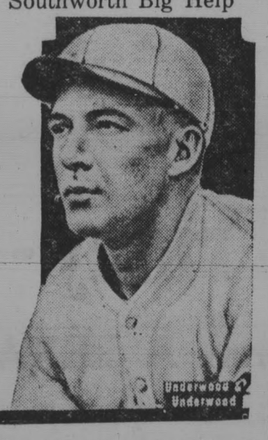
"You know," he said, "we have a young team—just a bunch of kids. They made more hits than any other club in the league and scored almost as many runs.

"But, it takes pitchers to get up there. Whenever you see a club win in fairly good streaks and then drop games in just as long streaks, remember, it's the pitching. If you have the pitchers they stop the losing streaks. If you don't, it's luck when they stop."

Cob denied rumors that he would be replaced as manager of the Tigers by Dan Howley, or anyone else.

"Those rainy day stories read well," he said, "but I'll be back here next spring, and if we find the pitchers, we have a young club that can do the rest."

Southworth Big Help



Billy Southworth, Cardinal outfielder, has had one of his best years during the present season. His batting, fielding and base running have been a big help to the Cardinals.

Overdoing!

Hurry, Worry and Overwork Bring Heavy Strain.

MODERN life throws a heavy burden on our bodily machinery. The eliminative organs, especially the kidneys, are apt to become sluggish. Retention of excess uric acid and other poisonous waste often gives rise to a dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning perfectly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. More and more people are learning to assist their kidneys by the occasional use of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic. Ask your neighbor!

A MOB OF CIVILIANS CAPTURE AN ARMY TRUCK

WHEN the European war blew up on Monday morning, November 11, 1918, the detonation jarred America's war-weary people into the most whole-hearted, spontaneous, unrestrained and reckless celebration ever recorded.

And what a celebration it was! Cities went wild and villages rejoiced. Everyone rushed to the streets to join with the mad throng in its unorganized parades and revelries. Doctors, lawyers and bankers deserted their offices and forgot their dignity to add their voices and cheers to the general pandemonium.

In the cities throughout the country, particularly the larger ones, the phenomena of that first Armistice day were strikingly of one order. What was happening in New York was happening in Chicago. And in Philadelphia, Milwaukee, San Francisco, Detroit, St. Louis, Atlanta, Cleveland and Boston it was the same.

America really had two Armistice celebrations, the one of Thursday, November 7, four days earlier, precipitated by a cabled rumor, serving as a rehearsal for the great exhibition of the following Monday.

From newspaper accounts of the following day we read that in the cities, particularly New York and Chicago, "delirium and license disputed the rule of the streets. The mad revel of the day approached an orgy by night."

The wild celebration began in the darkness of the early morning hours of Monday, raged during the day, gathering speed and recklessness the while, and ended in hysteria in the early morning hours of Tuesday. Before midnight the good natured rowdyism had become general. Thousands of men and women had their hats knocked from their heads and trampled underneath the feet of the hilarious multitude. Those who had lost their hats seized those of others and wore them away. Disheveled girls snatched caps from sailors and hats from men and were openly kissed and hugged in joyous revenge. The girls were no more backward or diffident than the men. Who cared? The kaiser had been whipped and the war was over.

Starting in the darkness of early Monday morning, when men answered the shriek of whistles by leaping from bed to seize revolvers and shotguns and rend the as yet unbroken silence of the neighborhood with the bark of fire-arms, the thing grew in proportion as the minutes and hours passed on.

Women, young and old, waited only long enough to throw overcoats over their night dresses before they rushed to the streets beating on kettles, tooting horns, and crying to neighbors that peace had come. From open windows came the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," "America," "Over There," and any other airs the sleepy-eyed revelers could think of.

Then here and there along residential streets the flames of quickly kindled bonfires appeared. And in the dim light of the dawning half-clothed men and women performed weird dances in honor of the kaiser's downfall.

Trains leaving the awakening cities roared through the countryside with whistles shrieking the news to suburban towns and outlying villages which soon blazed with light as the villagers arose to celebrate. Farmers, miles from the railroads, heard the screaming whistles and rose to telephone their neighbors or to apprise them of the news by firing shotguns.

With the coming of the light, the exodus from the residential districts into the business sections downtown began. Hurriedly throwing on their clothes, men and women rushed in search of any means of transportation which would take them to the scene where as actors they were to stage the most spectacular performance of its kind in history.

Trolley cars, elevated trains and suburban lines dumped their shouting freight and went back empty for more. Motor cars, trucks and busses carried twice as many passengers as there was room for as they picked their way through the crowding streets with exhaust wide open and sirens and horns blowing.

Eleven o'clock in the morning found downtown streets jammed as on a pre-Volstead New Year's eve. Milling around and weaving in and out was a cheering, shouting, laughing crowd, which had brought with it and was continuing to procure every imaginable accessory which would add to the supercarnival spirit. All the noisemaking devices known in the history of man were impressed into service. Horns sounded everywhere. Men and boys appeared rolling huge garbage cans, beating them with clubs. Cowbells, cymbals, dishpans added to the uproar.

Crowds thronged the five-and-ten-cent stores, depleting the stock of horns, crackers, drums, confetti, dishpans, skillets and rolls of paper. Youths emerged with arms full of huge boxes of cheap talcum powder which soon began to dust the faces and clothing of the mob. Thrown aloft, it descended in great clouds, whitening everything it touched.

Old men marched down the streets beating children's drums. Gray-haired women hammered on shiny dishpans which were destined never to float a dish. All the while the noise was growing in volume, but the crowd appeared to be hearing it the less.

The canyons of the business district re-echoed the senseless din, while the skyscrapers belched tons and tons of paper from their countless windows. Flying bits of paper filled the air everywhere, until it looked as though a mighty snowstorm were sweeping the city. The streets became carpeted with it. Long streamers of ticker tape and adding machine rolls hung from trolley poles and wires and from windows and fire escapes.

Confetti filled the air. From offices high in the air came hundreds of pages of torn telephone directories, fluttering to the street. They littered the pavement. New stationery, file cards, records, letters, wall paper—everything was hurled in that mad scramble of released emotion.

Office girls hurled the contents of wastebaskets on the heads of the rioters below and then rushed to join in the merrymaking on the streets. Pandemonium was a churchyard compared to this. It was All Fools' day, Fourth of July, Hallowe'en and carnival rolled into one mighty billow of merriment.

Whenever a man appeared with a large flag he immediately became the leader of an impromptu, unorganized parade, soon swelling into thousands, where staid matrons marched with chorus girls, where bartenders, still wearing their white aprons, linked arm and arm with men clad in ministerial garb, where white mingled with black, the rich with the poor, where good church women were not too good to march arm in arm with the outcast of the streets.

Drunk with excitement, women and girls set the pace in the maddest revel the cities had ever known. Motor trucks and ice wagons became triumphal chariots where girls, still undaunted from a hundred maulings, rode astride the radiators disregarding the reckless display of silken hosiery, or clung in clusters to the necks of drivers and passengers to keep from falling while they sounded their wild pean of victory. No, it was not a peace celebration, it was a victory riot.

Reserve and propriety were thrown to the winds. Girls hugged and kissed men they never had seen before. Men hugged and kissed girls they never had seen before. Men and women who had touched no liquor before in their lives imbibed in saloons and from bottles passed freely among the crowds in the streets. A woman of sixty appeared riding through crowded thoroughfares on a stolid mule.

That was Armistice day in America. But America was not alone in her celebration. In Paris and in London the same wild scene was being enacted. News of the signing of the armistice by Germany came to London as a distinct surprise. Up until eleven o'clock of that morning the streets were normal. People were going about their business under the stress of wartime pressure which had borne down for more than four years.

Then suddenly there was an explosion. A terrific silence. Then all London swept en masse into the streets and went wild. The same shouts, the same noise. The streets filled with seething humanity and traffic halted. Flags swirled everywhere. Old women sold them on the streets, the demand being almost as great for the Stars and Stripes as for the Union Jack.

Hotels, clubs, cafes and restaurants overflowed with joyous men and women released from their war burden of more than four years. "The war is over! The war is over!"

On through the day and on through the night the wild celebration plunged until sheer exhaustion put an end to the fierce merrymaking. On the following morning the large dining room of the Savoy hotel was strewn with the tired bodies of sleeping men and women who, worn out with the day's great strain, dropped in their tracks.

Can Get Along With Eight Hundred Words

The average man is adequately equipped for communicating with his fellows with a vocabulary of only 800 words. This is according to Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly, who, as lexicographer and editor of the New Standard dictionary, has come in contact with 515,000 English words, as reported in an article by Angus McNeil in Liberty.

"In its first year," says Doctor Vizetelly, describing the way in which words are learned, "a child acquires a vocabulary of ten to twenty mispronunciations, which, however, mean something to both child and mother. During its second year this total will increase to 300 or 400 words, depending on how educated the family is. At the end of the third year the infant will know 800 words. These will last him a lifetime if they must. Of course he will increase his vocabulary as his interests and activities expand, but the 800 will serve him, even if he never learns another word."

The average fairly educated human being, Doctor Vizetelly points out, however, knows from 10,000 to 20,000 words, with a great reserve of words that are comprehensible only to those in similar lines of interest and endeavor.

The Generous Butcher

Mr. Newed (solicitously)—And how do you get along with the butcher, darling?

Mrs. Newed—Oh, splendidly! He's such a generous man, dear! When I order a four-pound joint, he always sends one weighing six or seven!

Mutual Compliments

Maud—Did you hear what your friend Edith said about you?

Marie—No. I was in the other group talking about her.

That's Fair

Bank Clerk—As you work in a theater, can you get me a few tickets for the show?

Actor—Certainly. And, as you work in a bank, can you get me a few notes?—Paris Journal Amusant.

A Great Fight

Hobbs—So your wife recovered. I hear the doctors made a great fight for her life.

Dobbs—They did, and they almost got it, too.

Oldun—But not so much as success has to do with one's appearance.

Mrs. Furtado Makes Rapid Recovery

Sacramento Woman Suffering From After-Effects of "Flu," Nervous Exhaustion and Run-Down Condition, Recovers Perfect Health. Thanks Tanlac

The experience of Mrs. Mary Furtado, living at 2015 24th St., Sacramento, Cal., should be of interest to everyone suffering similar ailments.

When Mrs. Furtado was only 22, "flu" left her in a badly run-down condition.

"I was in such a weak condition," says Mrs. Furtado, "that I couldn't do a thing. I was awfully thin, had no appetite whatever, and was so weak that I couldn't do my housework. My nerves were in a terrible state, everything worried me and I felt some days as if I would go to pieces.

"Tanlac certainly proved to be just what I needed. I not only gained 15 pounds in weight, but that tired, run-down feeling left me completely, my appetite improved wonderfully and the nervousness all disappeared.

"I never felt better in my life than I did after taking Tanlac. I could do my housework and I felt just perfect.

"Whenever I feel the least bit run-down or tired I always go back to Tanlac, for it never fails to build me right up."

Benefit by Mrs. Furtado's experience. Let this marvelous tonic made from roots, barks and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula, rebuild your run-down body, drive out pain and poison, give you robust health.

Results from first bottle amazing. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today! Over 40 million bottles sold.

C. of C. In Session

The Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce held an interesting meeting last Monday evening. Nightwatchman Raney appeared before the chamber asking for information as to whom he should report when retiring in the morning. It was agreed that he should report to Harry Doughty, who was the first to open his place of business. The local business men are contributing to the salary of Mr. Raney. M. Pistolesi, the well-known engineer of San Francisco, was present and delivered an interesting address upon the needs of the peninsula and the neglect of it by San Francisco. Mr. Pistoesi dwelt for some time upon the feasibility of a third road down the peninsula. It was his plan to have the new road continue from Third street in the city and meander along the bay shore to the parking houses at South San Francisco and there to join the Bayshore highway. The chair appointed a committee of five to investigate the enterprise. The committee appoined was W. J. Murray, L. H. Cook, J. J. Harcom, Ed Crocker and Frank Cain. These gentlemen will confer with a similar committee in San Francisco.

"The Sporting Lover" At Theatre

Conway Tearle in "The Sporting Lover" will appear this evening in the New Menlo Theatre. Comedy, "The Hurricane." Tomorrow evening, Johnny Hines will appear in "Rainbow Riley." Comedy "Papa's Pest." "Fighting Hearts" Monday and Tuesday. Rex Beach's sensational novel, "The Goosewoman" wil be presented. Comedy "Crowning the County." Wednesday and Thursday, Mary Pickford in "Sparrows." Comedy, "What's the World Coming To."

On Wednesday morning the mortal remains of Arthur O'Neill were placed alongside those of his father and mother in Holy Cross cemetery. A large number of friends attended the services in the Church of the Nativity and followed the body to its last resting place. The tragic death of Mr. O'Neill on Sunday shocked the community. Whether or not he threw himself under the wheels of a north bound train arriving here a little after 12 o'clock with suicidal intention of fell accidentally in an endeavor to board the last coach is a matter of conjecture. He was badly mangled and lived only a few hours after the accident.

Mr. O'Neill was born in Menlo Park forty years ago and has resided here all his life. His wife was injured in an automobile accident some months ago at San Mateo. This preyed on his mind. A settlement with the automobie owner was reached last Saturday evening when his wife received a check for a considerable amount.

His father, the late John O'Neill was a Civil war veteran, having participated in the battles of Gettysburg and Antitam. He was severely wounded in the latter engagement. The deceased is survived by his wife and three brothers, Edward, John and Daniel O'Neill.

The sudden and untimely death of Daniel Driscoll last Monday was a severe blow to his many friends in Menlo Park, where the deceased had resided since 1892 when he first came here to do clerical work for the Sherwood Hall Nurseries. The cause of the death was a heart afection. Mr. Driscoll was a bookkeeper for the Atlas Powder Company of San Francisco and not feeling well remained home on Monday when he was taken severely ill and expired in a short time.

Mr. Driscoll was born in San Francisco fifty-nine years ago. The Church of the Nativity on Wednesday high mass. At the requiem Monsignor Gleason of Palo Alto paid a glowing tribute to the character and worth of the deceased. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery. The deceased was an able accountant, a clever writer and a man beloved by all. He is survived by his wife and son, Lawrence, both of whom have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

PLAN MAP OF TWO COUNTIES

A large seven-foot contour map of San Francisco and San Mateo county is to be prepared by both counties, assisted by the federal government. The movement for the map was started in the city some time ago by prominent merchants of the city and officials of this county. It will take two years to complete the map, but when finished it will be filling a long felt want. It will be invaluable to the people of both growing commhnities that have many interests in common.

The supervisors have pledged support to the proposition and will appropriate funds for the work.

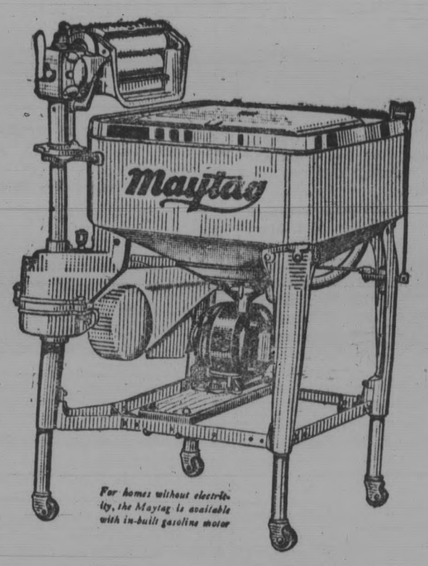
2 More Trainloads of Maytags 2

No hand-rubbing is necessary with the Maytag because every garment is washed thoroughly in the satin-smooth tub, that drains and cleans itself in 30 seconds after the washing is done. While the Maytag is compact enough to use in any space that will accommodate a chair, the tub holds more clothes–21 gallons instead of the usual 17.

Two more solid trainloads of Maytags to meet California's demand for the washer with the life-lasting cast-aluminum tub! More than a million dollars worth of Gyrafoams to bring washday happiness to California homes!



To bring the short and easy Maytag "wash-hour" that means big tubfuls washed in 3 to 7 minutes. A whole washing—50 lbs. of clothes (dry weight) washed in one short hour.

Phone the nearest Maytag dealer. Use a Maytag next washday without expense or obligation of any kind. If the Maytag doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

NOTES OF A WORLD TRAVELER

By Professor Ferdinand Schraidt

Eighth Article

The city of Munich itself is not the principal attraction for the large crowd of tourists arriving there during the summer months. The great theatres and concert halls are closed; "society" and less prominent mortals have left their city homes and are away in the country, in the mountains. Early in the morning, and sometimes before dawn, the ticket windows at the depot are busy to serve the great demand. As soon as the gates are open to the tracks, numerous excursionists are racing along the trains, eager to find a seat at the window for their party, because the scenery to be enjoyed on this journey to the Alps is worth seeing. With great vivacity the prospective tour is discussed and explained with importance by those, who have been there and know and are listened to with the expectancy of happy children. They are going into the Alps, and this is different from any other trip they ever have taken before.

On a bright Sunday morning the crowd, of course, is too large to be accommodated comfortably and the open platforms and even the roofs of the cars are jammed with people fortified with the bulky knapsack on their back, thus taking up more space than seems to be coming to them, and everybody moves and pushes and apologizes himself through this mass of travelling folk, which must be tired out, it seems, through this manner of restless transportaion before reaching the intermediate destination and the beginning of their day's mountain hike. But we forget with such reflection that there is the very knapsack, and this commodity of Bavarian mountaineering contains an inexhausutable supply of culinary attractions, which are soon attacked, thus stabilizing the waning strength of the tourist at convenient intervals and rendering him fit, now to attempt any high peak, no matter how laborious its ascent might be.

There are numerous railroad terminals which are discharging the crowds from Munich at the foot of the ,'Hochgebirge" or high mountains. Perhaps the most important one, little more than a train-hour's distance from Munich, is Garmisch Partenkirchen, one of the attractive valleys of the Bavarian Alps. Out of the green bottom of the valley rise on both sides numerous giants of mountain rocks, forming the attraction for thousands of hikers each season, and hre is also the often talked of ascent, through Hell Valley Ravine and over the Moraine glacier to the "Zugspitze" (windy point), the highest point of the German Alps.

The walk through the ravine at the beginning of this trip is a novelty in itself; sunlight never falls upon this path which in places is cut like a tunnel through rocks, and winds hither and thither, following or crossing the ever roaring torrent of the creek, which has carved this narrow gulch hundreds of feet deep into the rock scarcely is the sky visible here and there on account of overtowering rocks when one follows the wet and slippery trail. But the walk is refreshing, to say the least, and the heat of the summer's day has no influence on the cool temperature here below, thus encouraging the hiker to go on untiringly and full of expectation of that, which is to be seen next.

The view broadens, and we gain a better idea of what is before us; mountains and rocks with a trial zigzagging higher and higher, until it is lost in the clouds and keeps us guessing how far it is yet to our distant goal. Soon the trail is becoming steeper, and a wire rope is fastened along side of it, by means of which one is guided safely along the more difficult place. Now we come to a vertical wall like a stepladder, iron clamps have been fastened into it, and those who are sure footed may proceed with the ascent. Fifty or more steps lead straight up; one false, and the abyss will receive the unfortunate one. Further and further the trail is winding; the clouds are already much nearer, and a fresh wind is blowing. And there rises another perpendicular wall across our path; we must traverse it on the iron spikes, a half inch thick, that run across the hundred and more feet of its width, and we hold on with our hands to a steep rope, that is conveniently anchored above the spikes. We hesitate, which foot first to set upon this novel one-way-bridge, it makes no difference; but we must not gaze too long into the alluring abyss; it might weaken our courage and knees, and put an end to our ambitions for the day.

Having crossed this wall step by step upon the spikes, one feels entitled to a short rest in spite of the coolness, that prevails in these heights. Looking back, we see way below in the distance the town, which we left in the morning there are the meadows and [illegible] Sheltering trees have long ceased to receive us on our way, nothing but low shrubbery grows up here, because the storms and short summer months will not permit abundant life to exist.

And yet, the flowers are plentiful, and are shining with singular bright colours. Among the scottered rocks and in the scarce soil, whih has broken loose and been swept down from the summit during many enturies, tending to level in time to come every mountain peak, we find hidden the prettiest Alpine flowers. There is nothing more tender and charmingly devoted, than thes e little flowers which exist in this great awe-inspiring mountain world. These attractive white and yellow, lavender and pink blossoms, nodding in reverance with the wind, have been assigned a serious task by mother nature; with their fine little roots they hold together the soil and sand upon which they thrive, and thus prevent in their way, the mountains from being farther washed out; they are to retard this slow decay and levelling influence of time, which seems a foolish undertaking for the tiny strength of these little plants; but there are many of them, and they are tenacious, these Liliputians, whose effort to hold together our mountains is beneficial and certainly worthy of notice.

But we have not reached the end of our journey; we must yet cross the glacier of the "Devil's Valley," with its cold masses of rock and eternal ice and snow. It is a dismal piece of earthly reality that presents itself at this point, and the cold breeze that strikes us here, where the blue sky is no more and only rocks and stone walls loom faintly through the descending fog, is no inducement for cheerful raflections.

Hayiig crossed this glacier we find our wire rope once more leading us on, steeper and higher, until at last we gain the first far view into the world before us. We have surmounted the clouds and now see peaks on all sides. Just to our left is a sharp and abrupt precipice along the trail, and we realize how comforting it is to feel the rope in our hand, especially in view of the wind from the right, which is now sighing, now striking in sharp gusts. The sun is setting behind a sea of snow-capped peaks, sending a last greeting over these silent witnesses of ages, and the snow which has been melting during the noon of the day, freezes again; our foot must be sure, and progress toward the top is slow.

But there, at last, looms at close range the cross from the East peak; in a few minutes, it is passed, and the last stretch over frozen snow is quickly made, down and then up again along a narrow lofty path to the West peak, where the light of the sheltering hut winks rest to the grateful tourist. It is ark all around, and the wonderful panoramic view from this "Zugspitze" is in store for the next morning, when every guest is up before sunrise to behold a marvelous spectacle: the sun appearing over the mighty Alps, a presentiment from a purer higher world, like a greeting from the eDity; and all the splendour of the material world below is fading away in view of this unspeakable glory.

Passage of No. 8 Would Block Development of Bayshore and Skyline

If the Skyline boulevard is to be paved and the Bayshore highway is to be built in the near future the sectional highway scheme No. 8 on the ballot, must be defeated and the gasoine tax plan for completion of the state system, No. 4 must be adopted, yesterday declared Supervisor Richard J. Welch, congressman-elect from the Fifth district, San Francisco.

Welch, a member of the executive committee of the Good Roads Gas Tax Campaign Committee opposing Eight and supporting Four, explained that only the accomplishment of this dual objective at the polls Tuesday will make possible a complete and early "breaking of the bottleneck."

The congressman-elect is known as the "father of the Skyline boulevard project" and is a leader in the battle for the Bayshore highway between San Francisco and San Jose.

"San Francisco, San Mateo county, Santa Clara county and Santa Cruz rounty will find the day far postponed when they may secure the needed additional arteries of travel along the peninsula if the vicious sectional and wholly inadequate provisions of No. 8, backed by certain Los Angeles interests, are written into the state constitution," said Welch

"Insofar as the paving of the Skyline boulevard and its completion into Santa Cruz county is concerned, it would take a corps of Philadelphia lawyers to figure out from the complicated provisions of No. 8 just when and how this section of the state is to get a share of highway funds to finish this work.

"In the first place, the arbitrary list of primary highways written into the state constitution by No. 8, making 79.1 per cent of southern California highways primary and only 56 per cent in the north, relegates the Skyline boulevard to the secondary class.

"The secondary class roads are allotted but 25 per cent of the inadequate sum of $5,000,000 annually provided by No. 8 for new construction. Then under the inequitable spilt of funds between the two arbitrarily-created divisions of the state, 48 per cent of this secondary road fund is diverted to the 13 southern counties, leaving but $650,000 a year to be spread over all the secondary roads in the 45 northern counties.

"It would work out so that the 13 southern counties would get 3.2 times as much per mile for secondary roads as the northern portion of the state.

"The situation as regards the Bayshore highway is just as bad with No. 8 providing but half the annual sum deemed necessary by all competent authoritites for completion of our highway system within twelve years.

"The lion's share of the 75 per cent of new construction money allotted to primary roads is diverted south by the disproportionate ratio of roads made primary in the 13 southern counties.

"The Bayshore highway is left in the primary class but with only 56.3 per cent of the state highway mileage in the northern 45 counties classified as primary as against 79.1 per cent in the south and the insufficient sum of $3,750,000 divided on this inequitable basis between the two divisions of the state, San Francisco and the peninsula can exepect to wait at least twice as long for completion of this necessary traffic artery as has been anticipated.

"The one-cent gasoline tax proposed in No. 4 would be ample for all purposes and would raise more than $10,000,000 annually for completion of our highway system on a state-wide and equitable basis. The discretionary authority of the California Highway Commission is not disturbed by No. 4 and we could look forward to completion at an early date of the two additional outlets down the peninsula, linking San Francisco, San Jose, Santa Cruz and intermediate communities.

"It is up to this section of the state to vote solidly against Eight and for Four if the bottle neck is to be finally and thoroughly smashed."

State Controller Urges Passage of Auto-Stage Tax

Sacramento, Oct. 29 — State Controler Ray L. Riley, recognized as one of the foremost experts on matters of taxation in the entire west, in a public statement today urged the voters to give their approval to Proposition No. 2 on the ballot at the election Nov. 2.

In giving his reasons for advocating the passage of the amendmnt, Riley said:

"Both from the standpoint of the state and enterprise involved, Amendment No. 2 is deserving of the support of the voters.

"This proposition fixes an equitable tax for motor stages and trucks. It is a good solution of a problem too long deferred.

"There are many phases of the amendment which should appeal to the state and the average citizen.

"First, this measure puts the taxation of those important utilities on a business basis and does away with the present unequal and highly unsatisfactory tax method.

"Also of great importance, it carries a stipulation that the revenues so derived shall be divided equally between the state and the counties for highway maintenance and repair. Although there are two highway financing measures on the ballot pertaining to new construction, this is the only act to go before the voters which provides money for the important work of maintaining and repairing the roads.

"Looking at the matter from another angle, motor transportation is here to stay and the companies engaging in it are entitled to just consideration. I feel that they are especially entited to have heir tax problem stabilized so that they can have a definite means of figuring their operation costs. Onder conditions now obtaining, It is absoutely impossible for these concerns to anticipate their tax requirements.

"In brief, I feel that Amendment No .2 merits the support of everyone interested in equitable adjustment of the tax problem."

County Values Large

Ray L. Riley, state controller, has just issued his annual statement showing the property value in, and indebtedness of each county for the year 1926 and rates of taxation. It is an interesting document. The report shows San Mateo county to have a classification of twenty-one. The next census will put the county in the fourteenth class in point of population. It is now in the sixteenth class. Number of acres of land assessed 303,384; value of real estate $25,155,265; value of improvements on real estate $15,253,960; value of personal property $3,073,095; money and solvent credits $458,565; value of non-operative property $43,940,885; total value of property as returned by the county auditor, $46076,342; grand total of all property $48,109,329; funded debt $1,034,000; floating debt with estimated interest $2,621.85; total county indebtedness $1,036,621.85 tax rate inside cities $2.36; outside $2.96 on each $100. No state tax this year.

LINES BY THE TOWN POET

By George Eikerenkotter

By Government test we are the best,
For climate I do mean;
Our rolling hills with rapture thrills
And valleys that are green.

When you take a ride, to Redwood glide
And spend an hour or two;
We'll show you 'round our grand old Town
And every thing that's new.

Our schools are the very best,
The grandest in the state;
You will get an education there
If you only have time to wait.

Our factory sites are of the best,
As the bay is close at hand
And all the sloughs come running through
Connected with this land.

Our cement plant is the very best.
It also stood the Government test;
Erected on our factory site,
It has been running day and night.

More improvements are in store
Down at the plant at the old bay shore;
This is considered doing well,
Making high class cement from the oyster shell.

Beautiful homes are being built,
Scattered here and there.
Prosperity seems on every side;
It's simply floating in the air.

So come to Redwood if you can;
We'll gladly show you 'round.
It has a boom, so come quite soon;
Redwood, that's the good old town.

Our stores are the finest in the state,
Obliging clerks on you will wait.
They will greet you with a lotty-dah,
Inherited from their grand-pa.

East Palo Alto

Tonight the people of the sommunity will be the guests of the Grange at the school auditorium for a picture program. Ben Blow, field secretary of the National Auto Club will show pictures commencing at the Ferry building in New York and coming over the Victory highway to the Ferry building in San Francisco. The program will start at 8 o'clock.

The meeting Monday evening, under the auspices of the Women's Club for a better understanding of the amendments was a profitable one. The speakers were to the point and every talk was most interesting. O. Berry of the Auto Club for northern California, talked on the gas tax. A. E. Roth of Stanford on No. 10. Judge Lakin talked on all but Nos. 3-4 and No. 10. Sam Greene of the Dairy Council and J. J. Mack of the oleomargerine industry, each presented their side.

The next meeting of the Grange will be Tuursday evening, November 4 instead of November 2, which would come on election night.

Next Wednesday is the regular meeting of the Woman's Club and Mrs. Carson E. Wood has charge of the program which will follow the business session.

Walter Gilpin of Sacramento and his two daughters, Fern and Susan, were week-end guests at the S. W. Hull home.

Mrs. Albert Van Wie is in the Palo Alto hospital where she is convelescing from an operation performed last week.

Mrs. Harry Griffin is on the sick list this week. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy of Watsonville, are here for a few days' visit.

A large number of East Palo Alto Grange members took the 6th degree at the State Grange session in San Jose last week and it has been reported the best session ever held.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gravestock and the latter's mother, Mrs. Mary Hutchinson, motored to Healdsburg Friday, where Mrs. Hutchinson will visit a sister for a couple of months. Mr. and Mrs. Gravestock returned home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Dunniway of Palo Alto moved out to their new home last week and Saturday evening entertained a number of guests in observance of their 25th wedding anniversary. The house was beautifully decorated with roses and ferns and a sumptuous banquet was served.

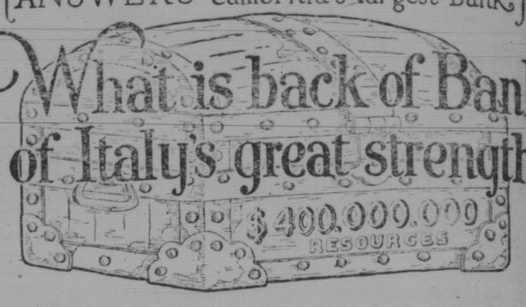
Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dezso are now located in the Vaught place on Donohoe street.

A two-story addition is being built onto the Seventh Dad Advent School and a bungalow is being built on the Bay road by one of the recent purchasers. Mr. L. Young who bought 115 feet of the Stubbe property on the Bay road.

A deep water well has just been completed on the McGee property on Runnymede street.

ANSWERS to popular questions about California's largest Bank

What is back of Bank of Italy's great strength?



SEVEN factors tell the story of the Gibraltar-like stability of California's largest bank:

CIVIC PATRIOTISM

THE man who makes his daily round, uttering the old complaint of living in a "Dead Town," invariably has the wrong viewpoint. The real trouble is that he, himself, is the dead one. He doesn't keep pace with his town, in fact, doesn't know just how much life his town has.

Whenever you find such a citizen, ninety-nine times out of a hundred you will find a man who is doing nothing to make his town a good town. He will be the man who buys his goods from a mail-order house, or goes to the nearest city to purchase no better commodities at such a price; that when his expenses are figured out he will have paid more than if he had staid at home and patronized his home merchants; he will have paid "too much for his whistle."

The making of a good town requires the utmost in co-operation on the part of all concerned. It requires public-spirited merchants and business men and a public that will show its appreciation of this public spirit by generous patronage.

The prosperity of a city depends as much upon this condition as any other to be found in the life of a community.

Have you ever considered the number of business houses in Redwood City that have been here for ten years or more? Have you ever considered what these men have meant to Redwood City? Have you ever thought of the honest goods at honest prices these men have dispensed during that time? Do you realize the thousands of dollars they have expended on taxes and improvements?

Why not spend your money with these men so that it will stay in Redwood City? It will in turn be spent with others in the city and this money means employment for others; necessities and a share of the luxuries for their families. And thus a happy community is built.

Think it over, you who have thoughtlessly spent Redwood City money in other cities. Redwood City needs you, she needs us all!

What will make Redwood City bigger and better? Industry, manufacturing, agriculture, payrolls.

BUT it is one question to get them and quite another to keep them. One trade analysist recently said: "The quicker we learn how to keep and take proper care of our industrial acquisitions, the easier it will be for us to secure them.."

Better Health -- Longer Life

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

PROCRASTINATION IN EMERGENCY SURGERY

By W. A. Byran, M. D., Nashville, Tenn., Member Gorgas Memorial Institute.

Every man and woman, even every chid ten years old, knows that in ordinary life emergencies arise, which are urgent, requiring instant attention. When the house is on fire they know that action must be taken at once or with the least possible delay. They can see the fire; they know from experience that failure to act means loss of the house.

The same individuals who act so promptly, so intelligently in ordinary emergencies too often show utter lack of intelligence in their action when confronted with an emergency surgical condition in themselves or in the family.

They want ti wait; they want to confer with a far away spouse or parent. In other words they defer. They use none of the intelligence displayed by the most ordinary individual in case of fire. They will wait till tomorrow or until after the wedding.

They question secretly the diagnosos of the most learned physicians and surgeons, and place their own conclusions in opposition to those of the most skillful diagnosticians. They do not believe they have appendicitis or a perforation or an internal hemorrhage or intestinal obstruction; it doesn't feel quite like what they think such a condition ought to feel.

Hence procrastination in urgent surgical conditions accounts for a neat percentage of the total mortality. In acute appendicitis the death rate should be not more than one in a thousand if the operation is done before the appendix ruptures. It is at least fifty in a thousand if rupture is allowed to occur.

Surgical skill cannot alter this discrepancy; it can be altered only by the patiene accepting the operation at such time as will offer him the best results.

Those who have to do the work, who have to sign the death certificate, are unanimous in their opinion that the layman should use the same rule of action here as in case of fire and make up his mind beforehand that when these surgical emergencies arise he will act with the same promptness exercised in ordinary emergencies. In the one instance he loses a house that can be rebuilt; in the other his life.

FAIR, FAT AND FORTY—BUT WHY EAT?

By Mark L. Emerson, M. D., Oakland, Calif.
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Like President Rooseveit's cowboy after visiting the circus, and viewing the giraffe, said, "There ain't any such animal," you can't be beautiful and fat, no more than you can be healthy and fat.

Life insurance companies won't insure you if you are too fat and movie companies won't employ you if you are over-weight, unless you are taken on as a burlesque.

Even out of the movies fat people are the source of much amusement and the but of many good-natured jibes. It is probably because they look so funny; but sooner or later it is a serious matter to be over-weight.

When you are building a house you pile up bricks and mortar until the house is built, and when it is finished, you do not pile on more bricks and mortar just to make it look bigger, distorting your lines of symmetry and beauty

When building up our stature, we force the feeding to make a strong structure, but after becoming mature and the structure of our body is complete, we should not keep on adding food and fat until we are bulging all over. We should be about normal weight at 40 years of age, also at 50, and at every other time of life.

The reason so many people get fat about 40 years of age is because they keep on overeating—eating all kinds of food, principally starches, fats and sweets, bread and butter, hot cakes, pie, waffles, fat and cream. If you wish to be attractive at 40, and you certainly should be attractive at this age, then keep your weight normal and do not be a misfit.

Fair at forty, certainly try and be so, for that is the best time of life. But to be good looking and fat is as impossible as it is to be fat and in the best of health. If you are over-weight, do not commence faking some peculiar diet or special cure of which you know nothing, but go to see your family doctor so that you may be fair at 40—without the fat.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

By Samuel Kleinberg, M. D. New York
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Infantile paralysis is a disease of the nervous system resulting frequently in paralysis of the muscles of the legs, arms, back and abdomen. It occurs most frequently in the summer and fall, and at all ages, though the large majority of patients are children.

There are some new cases every year, but sometimes, as in 1907 and in 1916, the disease comes in epidemics, afflicting many thousands. We are not quite sure of the exact cause, though it is reasonably certain that the disease is due to a very minute germ.

Scientific medicine is thoroughly familiar with the course of infantile paralysis and can prevent many of the after effects.

Deformities of the back, hips, knees, ankles, and hands often can be prevented by early and careful treatment. This disease requires, in most cases, a great deal of attention, even under the most favorable circumstances. It is necessary to do everything possible to prevent avoidable deformities.

Knowledge of this disease enables us to help practically every case, no matter how severe the deformity or of how long a duration. By means of massage, muscle training, various types of splints and a host of specially designed operations, most patients can be improved and aided in becoming independent and self reliant, as far as sitting, walking and ordinary duties are concerned.

The most difficult problems arise for those who live at some istance from big cities, who have permitted the deformities to continue for months and years without treatment. Today no patient suffering from infantile paralysis should be considered hopeless.

By the use of a brace, crutch, or an operation, a child with a complete paralysis of a limb from the hip to the toes, a so-called angle limb, can be made to walk. A person with a paralyzed arm can surely be improved by muscle training, tendon operations, etc. A child with a paralyzed back and curvature of the spine can be markedly improved in muscle power and posture so that he can get about comfortably by the use of corsets, exercises or by operations.

Do not decide from hearsay or upon a neighbor's advice that your child cannot be helped. Make sure before you permit a crippled child to go through life under a handicap that can be lightened.

HEADACHE DUE TO EYESTRAIN

By George W. Swift, M. D. Seattle
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

At times every parent wishes to know what causes the frequent headaches of their children after beginning school work. Some children claim that they do not care to study; some that their eyes burn and smart; some, that they become sleepy after an hour or so of study.

Many children suffer from eye strain and its consequent dull headache, and, not realizing that poor vision is behind the headache, change about this study to that, always aiming at one that causes less use of the eyes. These are signs that point clearly to the need of a complete eye examination for the correction of the vision to normal.

The examination can rarely, if ever, be properly one unless the eyes are placed at rest. Every parent knows that it would be useless to attempt to fit the foot to a new shoe if the little toes had a painful corn on the outside. It would be far better to place the foot at ease, either by removing the corn or wearing slippers until the pain had eased. Then a good fit could be easily obtained and a comfortable shoe brings relief.

The comparison is quite useful when applied to the fitting of glasses. An optician or "glass vendor," no matter how complete his office and mechanical equipment, must of necessity fit glasses when the eyes "hurt" or are under strain.

Headache is the manifestation of the sore strained eye. To place the eyes at rest "drops," either of atropin or homatropen, are used by oculists (physicians who specialize in disease of the eye). These drops dilate the pupil and temporarily paralyze the accomodation of the eyes.

This permits an accurate measurement for glasses. The effect of atropin lasts for from 10 days to 2 weeks; homatropin only 24 to 48 hours. Children usually require atropin, the stronger of the two drugs.

After a proper adjustment of glasses the headaches should disappear. If they do not then the parents should have the same oculist recheck and be sure that the glasses are as prescribed.

SELECTING A HUSBAND FOR MISS X-RAY

By Lewis Gregory Cole, M. D. New York City
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

X-Ray is the youngest sister of the medical specialists. She was born about a generation ago and is just now coming into maturity. In the early days Miss X-Ray was not considered a legitimate, dignified member of the family of medical specialties.

Like Topsy in Uncle Tom's Cabin, she "just growed up" without much supervision from her parents, General Medicine and Mrs. Electricity and she was rather quarrelsome with all her sister specialties.

But in her early 'teens she was an interesting flapper who attracted many suitors. Some of them were qualified with medical degrees and some were not. Now comes the selection of a husband for Miss X-Ray.

Shall he be a physician with a knowledge of anatomy, physiology, pathology, medicine and some knowledge of surgery and something of the other sister specialties, pledged to a life of service and high ethical standards; or shall he be a commercial quack to ruin her reputation and wreck her future?

That is for you readers to decide. Every time you or your friends need an X-Ray and go to a man, who is not trained in the making and reading of X-Ray plates, you are favoring one of the less desirable suitors for the hand of Miss X-Ray.

The shadows of X-Ray plates are like the hieroglyphics of an obelisk. They are very interesting but of no value unless you know the language. They are like the Chinaman's laundry check.

X-Ray plates, too, are interesting but of no value unless the person who looks at them, knows the language and he can learn it only by years of shtudy. Unless a man knows anatomy, how can be know whether a bone is larger or smaller, harder or softer than normal?

Unless he knows papthology, that is, the manner in which disease attacks tissue, how can he interpret the X-Ray shadows in terms of disease? How can he tell whether the shadows he sees in the lung mean tuberculosis or not?

Many men flock to new medical specialties like gamblers to a new oil field. Some states and cities have done something to mitigate this evel, but "bootlegging" in this line, traffic in health and life, is popular.

A few surgical instruments do not make a surgeon; a saw, hammer and square do not make a carpenter; nor do a wrench or pipe tongs make a plumber. It requires years of special training to become a surgeon or an oculist and it requires an equal time to become a qualified X-Ray man.
